Milton C.N.R. Station Again Opens for Business

E. Chester, formerly of the C.N.R. telegraph staff at Guelph, has assumed his duties as new agent at the railway station in Milton. There has only been a caretaker service there since the agency had been removed in 1928. A staff of ten experienced carpenters and decorators have been there for some days and are completely renovating and redecorating the building. Before long it will present an appearance as attractive as any along the line. There is also a gang of men busy reballasting the line with crushed stone. Mr. Chester, who will board there until moving permanently to the village, reports that local traffic in surprising good. So far, only the 10:34 a.m. eastbound train makes regular stops at Milton. Four other trains make stops when flagged or for the de-trainment of Milton-bound passengers. In the station there are both Weston and Brampton telephones.

FIRE!

CIVILIZATION began with the discovery of fire by prehistoric man. And for many a human being, civilization, so far as he personally was concerned, has ended with a fire!

It is a curious truism that one of man's essential allies is likewise, under other circumstances, one of man's worst enemies. Controlled fire is a boon. Uncontrolled fire is a destroying demon.

The problem of controlling fire is as old as history. Immense progress has been made in the direction of perfecting fire-fighting apparatus and equipment, and developing materials that resist fire. The fire department of yesterday is a ludicrous thing in comparison to the amazing, efficient fire department of today, even as building construction of yesterday offered a veritable invitation to fire.

Aggressive effort has been made in recent years toward educating the public in preventing fire — and here, too, progress has been chalked up, but on nowhere near a comparable scale. Some of us have learned the simple lessons that will eliminate most hazards — many of us have not. It is a safe bet that at least one home out of two — and this includes new as well as old ones — contains flagrant hazards which the owner disregards.

In the law, ignorance is no excuse, and it would be a fine thing if that same principle were extended to cover the harboring of fire hazards. Each year, loss running into the millions results from improper storage of inflammable liquids, from needless accumulations of waste, from amateur tampering with electric fixtures, from carelessness with smoking materials. Such "little" things as these are responsible for a majority of all fires.
