ERIN

About three o'clock Sunday afternoon, Clifford McCulloch, who was alone in the McCulloch home, south of the village, attempted to kindle a fire in the kitchen range and used gasoline, which exploded and enveloped McCulloch in flames. He managed to throw the gasoline can and remaining contents into the yard and ran to the creek nearby and extinguished the fire which burned him about the body, neck and arms. Returning to the house, he extinguished a small blaze which started in the wall at the floor. Suffering great pain he lay on his bed until his parents returned, about 5:30 p.m., when Dr. Gear was called and the unfortunate young man was removed to the Guelph General Hospital, where he is being treated.—Advocate.

One monopoly the tombstone has always had cornered is that of saying nothing but good about a man when he's down.
