DAD

Dad is growing old and weary
And there's silver in his hair.
And his eyes are always solemn.
He has seen so much of care;
He has seen so much of sorrow,
He has known so much of pain.
He has borne the heat and burden
Of so many, many years.
Dad's already in the twilight
Of life's short fast-fleeting day.
And, perhaps we'll often ponder
When his load is laid away.
Oh the sleep we might have saved him
When his feet and hands were sore.
Or the joy we might have given
To the heart that beats no more.

We'll recall a hundred errands
That we might have gladly run.
And a hundred kindly actions
That we might have gladly done;
We'll remember how he labored
While his boys were all at play
When the darkness hides from us
At the closing of each day.

A WASHERWOMAN

I used to see her summer afternoons,
Stepping along the narrow, grassy plot.
Her arms piled deeply with crisp
snow-white clothes.
And always pausing when she reached
that spot
Between those two tall buildings first
of all
Along this street to let their shadows
fall.
Always she paused as if to rest; and so
I pictured her: bound to a wheel of years
That ran a groove of dull days, endlessly.
Coming tonight with neither smiles
nor tears.
Weary but with no magic lifting
dream
To make the moments aught but what they seem.
One day I spoke: "I marvel how you choose
Always such perfect days—yet, when you stay
To rest a moment there, I know you're glad
To see the end of one more washing-day."
"I like," she said, "to look beyond the
town—
And smell the dew—and watch the sun go down."
—Maude Ludington Cain.

HONESTY IN ALL THINGS

International Uniform Sunday School Lesson, November 27, 1938

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thou shalt not steal." Exodus 20: 15.
LESSON PASSAGE: Exodus 20: 15; Luke 19: 1 - 10, 45, 46.

In vain we call old notions fudge,
And bend our conscience to our dealing;
The Ten Commandments will not budge,
And stealing will continue stealing.
—Lowell

"Honesty is the best policy"—the Proverbs are on the side of honesty. An honest man's the noblest work of God—the poets are on the side of honesty. In daily life, however, sharp practice is regarded as clever. The only harm in dishonesty, it is felt by some, is the danger of being caught. Yet integrity is the basis of business life. Trade and commerce can be carried on only because a large number of people are honest. How different life would be if everyone were dishonest. The front page of the daily paper tells of a safe being blown open and thousands of dollars of securities stolen. The drug store messenger was robbed of the change in his leather pouch. Counterfeit bills were found to be in circulation. To offset all these dishonest practices costs money and adds to the overhead of business. Detectives and policemen have to be employed to prevent stealing and detect offenders. In the pioneer days of Canada few doors in country homes were ever bolted, but many city homes today have electric burglar devices for protection.

Conflicting Values, 1, 2
Dishonesty is but one evidence of a materialistic outlook upon life. If wealth is made the chief purpose in life, the philosophy soon grows that the end justifies the means. People who have acquired large sums of money and who can afford to live in leisure and luxury are admired and envied. Young people starting out on small wages are tempted to care more for wealth than for any other life ideal. Yet money doesn't satisfy the soul. Zacchaeus was chief among the publicans in Jericho and he was rich, but he had lost public respect and he had lost self-respect. There is no compensation for loss of reputation and self-esteem.

Conviction, 3 - 9
One day Zacchaeus changed his standard of values. His attitude was transformed by meeting Jesus. Almost instantly he saw the relative insignificance of wealth and the importance of character. Immediately he had the impulse to make restitution. He became generous, willing even to give half his goods to the poor and he was ready to restore four-fold to those whom he had robbed. After meeting Jesus, honesty applied to every area of the life of Zacchaeus. He would have to be honest with strangers as well as with his own family. He would have to be as scrupulous about his tax account as about his other bills. We are not really honest if we have one standard of honesty for our own business and a standard a little less lax regarding taxes and customs duties. However expensive absolute honesty may be it is well worth while for the sake of the peace of mind that only absolute honesty can give.

Refined Forms of Theft, 45, 46
Jesus drove profiteers out of the Temple courts. They were charging high prices to pilgrims and making money out of religious sentiments. Large businesses, by a small reduction of wages or a small increase of price, can make large profits for the directors at the cost of many humble workers and consumers. Governments also composed of men drawing high salaries may be unfeeling in the impositions they place upon multitudes of people. Industries receiving preferential tariff concessions over their competitors may make huge profits. What is known as theft, graft, or racketeering may be avoided, and yet refined forms of robbery may be practiced. The adulteration of food, the misrepresentation of goods by extravagant advertisements, the selling of cheaper substitutes are all methods of legalized stealing.

The Cure, 8, 10
The cure for dishonesty is not copy-book mottoes nor police court fines. A radical transformation of character is necessary. People who take the will of God as the rule of life will soon have sensitive consciences about dishonesty. Those who catch the idealism of Christ's great society upon earth will not readily take advantage of others. Lives committed to Christ inevitably show higher standards of business dealing. Salvation came to the house of Zacchaeus not merely because he became honest, but because he had had a new vision for himself by meeting Jesus. Life as a whole was transformed, not merely his personal bookkeeping. Honesty may be studied as an ethical question, but to produce honest people religion is necessary. Instead of merely trying to improve outward habits a genuine transformation of inward motives and desires is required. Honesty as the result of the indwelling presence of God is on a much surer basis than when it is practised from any self-seeking motive of good policy. It is this kind of honest desire in the innermost soul of a man that Christ can give. "Today is salvation come to this house," said Jesus to Zacchaeus and then, seemingly turning to the others present, he added, "Forasmuch as he also is a son of Abraham"—a son of Abraham by birth, and now worthily to be called a true son of the great Hebrew father. "Christ met him in the spirit of sympathy and yet in the spirit of justice. He discovered the just man in him, but never, not for a moment, condoned the unjust man. He did not declare pardon for the wrongs done to the poor men of Jericho. He awakened his sense of justice through personal sympathy, and the publican offered to make restitution. Then, when he was willing to do justice to right the great wrongs of the past, Jesus said, 'Salvation is come to this house.'

- Questions for Discussion
1. Why are many people so proud of being honest?
 2. What are the more common forms of dishonesty?
 3. Why is it thought smart to "beat the customs"?
 4. Why are door locks, safety deposit vaults and armoured express vans necessary?
 5. Is it always either necessary or possible to make restitution?

CANADA MAIN SUPPLY
The trade in canned or pickled pork, which is the main meat product imported by the West Indies (Eastern Group) and by British Guiana from Canada, has progressed steadily within recent years, until Canada is now the principal source of supply to these countries. In competition with the United States and Argentina.

SEED POTATO QUOTA
According to the preliminary report of the United States Commissioner of Customs, the importations of white or Irish certified potato seed from Canada, has progressed steadily within recent years, until Canada is now the principal source of supply to these countries. In competition with the United States and Argentina.

They cheerfully "CHIP-IN" to pay for the TELEPHONE

This is the practice in many homes — the "working age" youngsters to whom the telephone is a social necessity — chip-in to pay for its modest cost. They never miss the few cents a day that telephone service costs — in fact they, and their parents too, simply couldn't get along now without the telephone.

Reductions in telephone rates—local and long distance — in 1935, '36 and '37 have effected savings to telephone users in Ontario and Quebec of nearly one million dollars yearly.

1939 FORD CARS AND NEW MERCURY 8

PICTURED above are the two Ford V-8 cars and the new Mercury 8 announced by Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, for 1939. Top, Ford V-8 Fordor Sedan; centre, DeLuxe Ford V-8 Fordor Sedan; bottom, Mercury 8 Town Sedan. All three cars are individually styled. All have hydraulic brakes. The Ford V-8 is available in three models. It has a full grille and unobtrusive louvers at the rear of the hoodside. Interiors are roomy and well-appointed. The DeLuxe Ford V-8 has wholly new streamlines, a deep hood unbroken by louvers, a low radiator grille in bright metal and wide spaced headlamps. Both Ford cars are powered with the improved 85 horsepower engine. The Mercury 8 is entirely new to the Ford-Lincoln line and fills a place between the deluxe Ford and the Lincoln-Zephyr. It is a big car with a 116-inch wheelbase. Its V-8 engine develops 95 horsepower. The front end design with low radiator grille reflects Lincoln-Zephyr styling. There is a choice of four body types.
