The SNAPSHOT GUILD SHADOW PICTURES

Shadows tell a story here—more cleverly than a direct shot of the skilful group would have told it. Watch for shadows—they yield many a novel snapshot.

ARE you looking for snapshot ideas? Then just load up your camera, and have a try at shadow pictures. On a sunny day outdoors, every solid object casts a shadow. If this shadow falls on a light-toned surface, such as smooth snow or concrete, it stands out clearly—and there may be a picture opportunity there. People doing things—let shadows that often tell a complete story. A group of winter hikers or a ski party climbing a slope may produce shadows which make a more interesting "story" snapshot than the group itself. Many objects cast interesting patterns of shadow. A tree near a street lamp may throw a delicate tracery of shadow on a nearby building wall. A short time exposure of this, made with the camera on a firm support—and you have an unusual picture. Old-fashioned, ornate iron fences and gateways not only produce fascinating shadow patterns, but are often interesting pictures themselves. Include both the shadow and the ironwork in one picture, shooting from a viewpoint that shows as many "repeats" of the pattern as possible. Indoors, there are many chances for shadow pictures. Use a single photo bulb at one end of a room, and direct its light on the far wall. Let members of your family stand so that they cast grotesque shadows on this wall. Changing their distance from the light, and the height of the photo bulb from the floor, produces unusual effects. With this shadow arrangement, it is easy to have your subjects act out story-telling ideas. Short "time" exposures will be required in taking these pictures, because of the distance between the light and the illuminated wall. With a box camera, try exposures of several seconds. Whenever you're taking pictures, watch for shadow effects. They're the making of many a snapshot, and a special "shadow hunt," with your camera loaded and ready, might be worth your while. BURLINGTON SCHOOL PRINCIPAL TO RETIRE.
Alfred G. Green, principal of East Burlington public school for 14 years, has announced he will retire at the end of the June term. Over a period of 25 years teaching Mr. Green has had over 98 per cent. of pupils under his tuition achieve success in the entrance examination. "I prefer the old-fashioned method, whereby students with suitable standings on their year's work are recommended for entrance by principals, rather than the old way of having all students write final examinations," he said.—Daily Star.

Deerhound Was Known as 'Royal Dog of Scotland'

The Scottish deerhound once was known as the "Royal Dog of Scotland." One of the biggest of the dogs, or coursing hounds, and one of the oldest of breeds, this shaggy son of the heather in olden times decorated the halls and firesides of the Highland chieftains, and was their companion in the hunting fields, writes K. D. Dickey in the Philadelphia Record.

They were used for deer and stag hunting, in twos and threes, and were followed on horseback. One of them alone could bring down a 250-pound deer, but usually they held the game at bay until the hunters arrived. They are built like a greyhound, but heavier, and have almost a greyhound's speed. They have the keen scenting powers and general hunting ability of the entire hound family.

The Scottish deerhound does the same work on the Canadian plains, and is popular in Australia. He is used down under for hunting the "dingo" (wild dog), and in pursuit of the kangaroo.

The Scottish deerhound is a little smaller and lighter than the Irish wolfhound, which he resembles closely. The wolfhound averages 35 inches in height; the deerhound from 30 to 32. The Scottish dog is altogether more racy built, with a narrower head, and less spring of ribs. The coat is harsh and wiry, the kind that turns water; shaggy, sometimes with a silky strain. This mixed coat is not unusual in the United States where the climate is gentler than that of Scotland.

In color the dark blue-gray is preferred, but it runs through brindle, yellow, and sandy, to red or reddish brown, with black points, points being ears and muzzle. The oldest known strains, the McNeil and Chesthill Menzies, were of the yellow to red variety.

Ukulele Is of European Origin; Known for Ages

The ukulele is essentially a small guitar with four strings and was introduced to the Hawaiians in the latter part of the Eighteenth century by Portuguese sailors. So far as known, the guitar itself is of European origin, observes a writer in the Indianapolis News.

In the Royal library at Stuttgart, Germany, is a manuscript dated 1180 A. D. which contains a representation of the instrument. The Hawaiians imitated and modified the smaller guitar of the Portuguese and popularized it under the name "ukulele." The same instrument, particularly adapted to the wistful minors peculiar to the native music of Hawaii, became an instrument of jazz in the United States.

"Ukulele" is a native word, being derived from "uku" (flea or insect) and "lele" (to jump). Thus "ukulele" literally means "jumping flea," a name no doubt suggested by the motions of the fingers of the players over the instrument. The most common English pronunciation of the name is "yoo-koo-lay-le," although "oo-koo-lay-lay" more nearly approaches the Hawaiian pronunciation.

Hawaiian ukuleles are generally made of koa, a fine-grained wood obtained from the native tree called "acacia koa."

Angler Fish Does Not Swim

Many fish prey on others of their kind, but the Angler-fish does his fishing with "rod and line"—and he "patented" the idea long before man thought of it. Also known as the fishing frog and sea devil, the angler-fish is fairly common in British waters. The rod and line consists of a long filament, almost thread-like at the end and "baited" with a small flap. This bait looks like a tiny fish moving about in the water. When a codling or herring comes along it grabs the bait. At the same moment Mr. Angler-fish gives the line a jerk and opens his great mouth. That is the end of the codling or herring. The Angler-fish is an ungainly fellow. He doesn't swim, says Pearson's London Weekly. His fins have developed into a kind of legs and he just shuffles along the sea floor.

End of the Century

The year 1900 was the last of the Nineteenth century. The Twentieth century began with January 1, 1901. A century begins with the beginning of the first day of its first year and does not end until the close of the last day of its 100th year. The first century consisted of the years 1 to 100, inclusive; the Second century began with the year 101 and ended with the last day of the year 200.

HALTON ORGANIZATIONS CO-ORDINATE EFFORTS IN COUNTY CROP AND SOIL IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

The Halton Crop Improvement Association was inaugurated on Friday last when delegates representing the Acton, Esqueuse and Halton Agricultural Societies, the Halton Plowmen, and Halton Junior Farmers, met in Milton.

It was the enthusiastic feeling of those in attendance that a county-wide effort on the part of all interested organizations a worthwhile crop and soil improvement program will result in the county. The new organization which is affiliated with the above mentioned organizations, has already laid plans for a county seed fair to be held in Milton on March 3rd and 4th. A splendid prize list is being prepared. Inasmuch as only Halton farmers who have seed grains, small seeds and seed potatoes for sale are eligible to compete, and furthermore such exhibits must be of the same quality as that offered for sale it can readily be seen that the seed fair is to be continued on a practical worthwhile basis.

The newly elected directorate also feel that a sound crop program must be based on a thorough knowledge of the different soil types of the county and to this end it is hoped that the Soils Dept. of the Ontario Agricultural College will conduct a systematic soil survey in the county during the coming summer. With the assistance of Dr. G. McRostie of the Field Husbandry Dept., and Prof. N. Thomas of the Chemistry Dept., the directorate of the organization has laid tentative plans for a program which will also include tests with various varieties of hybrid corn as well as other tests with divergent varieties of grasses and clovers, varieties of cereal grains and further experiments with various commercial fertiliser mixtures. In laying down these tests we understand divergent soil types will be taken into consideration.

From information secured it would appear as if W. E. Breckon of Freeman, president elect and his associates are launching a program which if diligently promoted over a period of years, render a service of untold value to the farmers of Halton.

Other officers elected were as follows:

Vice-president—J. H. Willmott, Milton.

Secretary-treasurer—J. E. Whitlock.

Directors:—

Trafalgar—Warden Victor Hall, Hornby; Victor J. Lawrence, Oakville; Reg. Smith, Oakville.

Nelson—W. J. Robertson, Milton; Robt. Heathington, Freeman.

Nassagaweya—Reeve Geo. Gordon, Rockwood; Edgar Ellenton, Campbellville; Lloyd Chisholm, Milton.

Esqueuse—Thos. Brownridge, Georgetown; Edwin Harrop, Milton; Donald McNabb, Georgetown; G. W. Murray, Acton.

Erin and Eramosa—J. E. Pearson, Acton.
