TO MINT SILVER DOLLAR

There is to be a Royal Silver Dollar minted in honor of the visit of the :King and Queen, and it is suggested that 10,000,000 will not be too many as most Canadians will desire one as a souvenir of the happy occasion. Some Early-Day Pottery

Was Colored a Dull Red The first pottery factory known to have existed in Vermont was established in Bennington by Capt. John Fenton in 1793. Pottery was necessary in the community for the simple household needs of every-day

The first pottery produced was colored a dull red, some of it leadglazed and some of it covered with slip. This pioneer pottery supplied a market that extended to Montreal, Buffalo and New York, but it was not until Christopher Webber Fenton and his associates entered upon the manufacture of the finer earthenware in the middle of the Nineteenth century, that what we know us: Rockingham was produced by the Arm, writes Alice Rollins in the Los Angeles Times.

The factory had been making large quantities of earthenware and stimeware. A disastrous fire in 1845 destroyed the works and interrupted production for a brief period. It was at this time that Christopher Webber Fenton began manufacturing on his own account. He produced common white, common yellow and Rockingham. Fenton, himself, was not a great potter, but he did have "the gift of creative imagination" and was able to at--The Improvement Society havel tract those who were, themselves, the institution to first place as a servedly holds a high place in the Bingo! The Emancipation Proclamation According to Bassett's History of the United States. President Abraham Lincoln read to his cabinet, on tion proclamation to apply to the seceding states. He justified such action on the ground of military necessity. Postmaster-General Blair objected, because he believed it would endanger the autumn elections and Secretary of State Seward suggested that nothing be done until the army won a victory, otherwise the proclamation might be construed as a confession of weakness. On September 17, 1862, Lee's invasion of Maryland was checked and on September 22 (Bassett gives September 23, but other sources give September 22) Lincoln issued the preliminary proclamation announcing that slaves would be declared free in all states resisting the Union on January 1, 1863. On that date the final proclamation was issued.

Old Zulu Customs An old Zulu custom is called "being ashamed of the mother-in-law." A Zulu man must never look at his wife's mother. If they meet by accident they must turn their heads away and pretend not to have seen each other. If ever there is real need for them; to speak together they must go to opposite sides of a tall fence and shout over the fence. A Zulu wife must not mention her husband's parents.
