SHARP PAINS SHOT THROUGH KNEES

Woman Suffered 10 Years

"Since coming here from England 10 years ago," writes a married woman, "I have suffered badly from rheumatic pains. I bought medicine, lotions, liniments, and have taken concoctions until I was tired spending my money. I heard of Kruschen Salts so often, that I thought one day I'd try that. By this time my knees were frequently full of terrible pains. I bought a bottle of Kruschen and took a teaspoonful every morning. It had no effect. But my husband said 'Persevere! Give it a chance to act.' Well, I did and before long my knees were nearly normal. I kept on, and believe me I am not like the same woman. I walked four miles the other day and felt fine, whereas before I could hardly walk across the floor."—(Mrs.) E.A.

What more need be said about the relief that Kruschen Salts can bring to sufferers from the pains and stiffness of rheumatism?

Delighted His Audience

Gatty Sellers, the world's greatest descriptive organist, gave a wonderful recital in Knox Presbyterian Church last Thursday evening. Every one present was delighted with the program rendered.

MILTON

A life-long resident of Milton, James Morley, passed away in his sleep last Friday morning, in his 76th year. He was a member of Grace Anglican Church and a well-known pianist. He was also a member of the Milton fire brigade for many years. Deceased was also a poultry fancier, breeder and exhibitor of game birds. Mrs. Morley died eleven years ago. Surviving are three sons and two daughters: George and Fred both of Milton; William, and Mrs. Robert Merrett, Peterboro; Mrs. J. Brush, Milton; also by three brothers and two sisters, Samuel, Vancouver, John and Frank, Milton; Mrs. O. Burrows, Brampton, and Mrs. C. Yates, Milton.

On Tuesday, March 7th, the sad news reached Milton of the death of Hubert Peacock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peacock, South Wales, N.Y., formerly of Trafalgar township. Hubert, aged 27 years, was operating a garage in that town and while bringing in a car to be repaired his truck skidded on the treacherous ice and went over a 20-foot embankment, the young man being instantly killed.—Champion.

Early Clockmakers Made Odd and Useful Tickers

Craftsmanship among the medieval clockmakers was carried to a point which would do credit to a modern artisan. Working for cardinals and princes, they had unlimited funds and unlimited labor power to aid them in production and they set up some very creditable clocks which tell the time as well as when they first did 500 years ago.

Clocks were so rare and so useful that they were held in esteem and awe in those days. The first clock to be set up in England—in the old palace yard in 1288—had a permanent official appointed by the crown to take charge of it, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Medieval clocks could be very elaborate pieces of work, outliving anything to be seen in our day. To strike the hours, singing birds, crowing cocks or horn-blowing trumpeters would be ejected from special compartments. Processions of church officials and military officers, dressed in vestment or uniform complete to every detail, would be made to parade on a platform in front of the dial to announce the time of day. Bells would sound a different chime for every hour of the day.

Some of the medieval clocks were even rigged to show the movements of the stars and planets. This they did with considerable accuracy—a by no means unworthy achievement for any clockmaker anytime.

Earliest Corn Grown in Peru, Scientists Report

Corn on the cob first appeared in the damp savannahs of South America and attained its present form under cultivation by the farmers of prehistoric Peru, the National Academy of Sciences reports.

The origin of maize, or Indian corn, long has been a puzzle to botanists and archeologists. It was due to a single gene mutation from a wild form of pod-corn, in the opinion of agricultural botanists.

Maize, no longer found in a wild state, must originally have had "the two essential characteristics" of pod-corn to survive in the wilderness. These are a protection for the individual kernel and a means of dispersal of the seed.

Troubled by the total absence of wild pod-corn in Peru, the greatest center for cultivation of maize, the scientists looked long before they discovered evidence that it must have grown there in very ancient times. In the Peabody museum at Yale they found a faithful replica of a prehistoric ear of pod-corn of Peruvian workmanship.

Their conclusion was that Peru's able farmers soon cleared their maize fields of the undesirable pod-corn, which appears abundantly in Central America, where the Indians were less civilized and less careful of the purity of their crops.

Builds Nest, Hunts for Bride

The male stickleback, common in British ponds and streams, is a wonderful father but a fickle husband, observes a writer in Pearson's London Weekly. He builds a nest, similar to a bird's nest, with decaying vegetation. Then he assumes his brilliant coloring and goes in search of a bride. He brings her home and she lays her eggs in the nest. Then she gets the "order of the boot" and Mr. Stickleback brings home another bride. Then another and another until the nest is full of eggs. He then fertilizes the eggs and mounts guard over them, fanning the water with his fins to keep it circulating. When the young hatch he is still the dutiful parent and watches over them until they are strong enough to fend for themselves.

Size of the Baltic Sea

Although the Baltic sea is smaller than the greater sister sea south of the continent, it is a sizable body of water. The distance from the Skagerrak around into the head of the Gulf of Bothnia is more than 900 miles, and the main body of the sea is over 150 miles in width. It will surprise most readers to know that the shores of the Baltic are governed by the same number of governments that control all the Mediterranean, ten in each case. A curious difference between the two seas is that while the Mediterranean is more saline than the ocean outside of the Strait of Gibraltar, the Baltic is almost as fresh as a lake.

Canal Open to All Nations

Conceived by the French, the Suez canal was at first approved by Egypt, but opposed by Turkey and Britain. Finally completed by the French, it was opened in 1869. In 1875 Britain secretly bought control of the Suez company. In theory the canal is open to ships of all nations, in war as well as peace. Ownership of the canal is due to revert to Egypt in 1956, since it was built on Egyptian land.

Odd Greeting in Tibet

It takes more than a handshake to prove one's friendship in remote Tibet. In remote land the natives first receive a visitor by making him a number of bows, sticking out their tongues at him each time they rise. This ritual, however, is only a preliminary to the real greeting. As a supreme gesture of friendship, the host then offers his left ear to the visitor and indicates that he may cut it off if he so wants.

Leadership League

A public meeting will be held in the Public Library at 8.15 p.m., FRIDAY, MARCH 24th, under the auspices of the Leadership League.

The meeting will be for the purpose of full and free discussion of all problems affecting taxation, unemployment, the youth problem, and matters concerning the welfare and prosperity of the town and country. A cordial invitation is extended to all young people, all residents of the Township and all interested in Canada and the Empire.

It is hoped that a vigilant Ratepayers' Association may be organized at this meeting. This meeting is definitely not for the purpose of organizing a third political party, is non-partisan, and with the express purpose of bettering conditions locally and generally in Canada.
