The SNAPSHOT GUILD CHOOSING A CAMERA

Fast vacation-time action calls for a speedy shutter. Nobody wants to miss shots like this, or get pictures that are blurred and fuzzy because of movement.

If you are planning to get a new camera for your vacation this year, let me suggest that you do not delay until the last moment, and then have to pick your instrument in a great rush.

A camera should be chosen with care and attention to every detail—picture size, lens, shutter, view finder, ease of opening and handling, finish and durability. Moreover, it should be obtained early enough for you to become thoroughly familiar with its workings, because on a vacation you will often want to use it in a hurry.

Compare and handle several cameras before you choose. Study lenses—maybe you will want an f.8.3, to make sure of well-timed snapshots on dull days, or an f.4.5, twice as fast, for speedy action shots in bad light—as well as better indoor snapshots. It is well to bear in mind, too, that a good fast anastigmat lens gives sharper pictures—which means better enlargements if you vacation yields top-notch scenes that you want to have framed. Make sure that the shutter of the new camera has enough speed to take care of all your probable needs. It is bad when you have a chance for some good action snaps on the tennis court or beach and your camera shutter is too slow to get them. Remember, too, that if your hand is at all unsteady, a speedy shutter is a great help in getting sharp pictures.

You have a wide choice of camera styles and prices. You can get super-speed miniatures with f.2 and f.2.8 lenses; others with f.3.5 lenses; cameras taking larger pictures that have f.3.5, f.4.5, and f.6.3 lenses. Naturally, the better the camera is—the more speed and versatility it has—the more it costs, but there is no need to spend in excess of your needs. Thousands of good pictures are made every day with moderately priced cameras, and they will serve for most snapshot purposes.

—Canada and Canadians said farewell to Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth last Thursday as they sailed from the harbour of Halifax on the S. S. Empress of Britain. It has been a memorable occasion for the people of Canada and one which we will not soon forget, and we venture to say one which King George and Queen Elizabeth will long remember after having been in Canada, so highly and affectionately welcomed in every city, town and hamlet which they visited. And as they journey home across the ocean to their home and to their loved ones we can picture them recalling many outstanding instances of their Canadian and United States tour. And so may they have a safe and pleasant journey home and may they soon come back to visit us again, and it is the desire of the people of Canada that they bring their two charming daughters, Princess Elizabeth and Margaret Rose with them when they next visit our fair land. So we say safe journey, and God bless them, long to reign over us happy and glorious, God Save Our King and Queen.

—There has been talk of resurfacing Georgetown's Main street this summer, and while this is fine, it would be a good move to have the roadway made at least two feet wider on either side, so that angle parking might be the next step. The number of cars coming to Georgetown on Saturday nights makes parking hard to find close to the location. Angle parking would allow more cars to be parked on the Main street, and traffic could move more quickly during the busy hours.
