GRILLER STRING QUARTET ON CBC NETWORK

An abandoned railroad car provided the first living quarters and workshop of the Grillier Quartet, famous British ensemble making its first extensive American tour this season and scheduled for the coast broadcast over the CBC from Toronto, Sunday, February 11 at 9:30 to 10:00 p.m. EST.

When the quartet was formed ten years ago the first need was a common residence. Living quarters had to be cheap as the four had just graduated from the Royal Academy of Music in London, with little money of their own and no outside financial backing. Prowling around the south of England they found the car stranded in a small coastal town, secured it and commenced housekeeping and ensemble practice.

Today they come to Canada as one of the most distinguished instrumental quartets in the world, and with special permission, as young Englishmen liable to service, to engage in this enterprise away from home. Their American tour, planned before the war broke out, is considered a valuable artistic contribution to the music season here.

Three well-known Canadian newspapermen will speak over the National Network of the CBC, Sunday, January 28, 9:05 to 9:30 p.m. EST. They are Bruce Hutchinson, of the Vancouver Sun, John Eld, editor of the Winnipeg Tribune, and Frederick Birchall, Canadian correspondent of the New York Times. They will take part in a special broadcast on the opening of Parliament and the speech from the Throne sponsored by the Office of Public Information in co-operation with the CBC.

Frederick Birchall has for over 20 years in the European Bureau of the New York Times, and has recently come to Canada to report Canadian activities for the paper. John Eld, a South African, spent some years on the Montreal Star before joining the Winnipeg Tribune. Bruce Hutchinson, a native of Victoria, British Columbia, is well known to the radio audience for his series, "Scrub Oak Hollow."

Ontario Subject of CBC Talk
Ontario, regarded in the West with slightly critical sentimentality as the "old home" province, and in the Maritimes as "Upper Canada," will be Arthur L. Phelps' subject when he speaks on Monday, January 29, 10:30 to 10:45 p.m. EST, from Winnipeg, in his "This Canada" series.

CBC Continues Adventures of Ben
It all started one very foggy night in London, and nobody knows how it will end! But CBC's fourth episode in the exciting mystery-comedy, "Number 17" will go a long way toward advancing the story of "Ben," the little Cockney who deserted life at sea for a much more tempestuous career on land. Rupert Lucas is playing this lovable J. Jefferson Farjeon character, who first delighted stage audiences and now is presented to Canadian radio listeners each Sunday night at 10:00 p.m. EST. Ben's adventures will further unfold on Sunday, January 28, as things get spookier and spookier at "Number 17."

CBC Salutes Finnish Patriot
Still clinging to his home in Helsinki despite war and Russian air raids, Jan Sibellus is now more than ever a hero to his Finnish contemporaries. On Wednesday, January 31, in a specially-prepared program, which includes some of the great composers best loved shorter works, the orchestra and chorus under the direction of Geoffrey Waddington pay a tribute to him at 10:00 p.m. EST, from the Winnipeg studios of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Works of Folk Song Authority on CBC Network

In writing ballads, the tune's the thing, according to John Murray Gibbon, one of Canada's greatest authorities on folk songs and ballads.

"It's simple enough to think up the words," says Mr. Gibbon, "but the trick is to find a fine old tune, one that has a quality to it that will keep it alive, and then write new words for old tunes. There are many tunes with good melodies in the public domain and when I wrote 'New World Ballads' that is where I went for the melodies. 'Down Vancouver Way,' for instance, owes its lovely tune to Goethe."

"New World Ballads" are being presented in a series of four programmes over the CBC-National Network, January 28, February 7, 14 and 21 at 7:00 to 7:30 p.m. EST, by choral groups from Montreal and Toronto high schools, under the direction of Irvin Cooper and Leslie Bell. The programmes are specified as part of the home studies of the high school children in both provinces.

NEWS of the Week

One bright spot in the Ontario news picture last week was Premier Hepburn's attack against the government at Ottawa made through the resolution he forced through the Legislature "regretting that the federal Government at Ottawa has made so little effort to prosecute Canada's duty in the war in the vigorous manner the people of Canada desire."

Stripped of all its manifestations, that resolution shines because it reflects the happy fact that democracy still with us in a vigorous state of health. In spite of the temporary system of regimentation to which Canadians have voluntarily submitted, the government in power can be attacked without the Canadian replica of the Gestapo tossing the attackers into the Kingston penitentiary without ceremony.

Similarly, we in Ontario may rejoice in the knowledge that a group of Liberal members who have stood under the Hepburn banner were able to spurn their leader's resolution without the danger of losing their jobs or having their families harassed by the friends of a dictator.

The ramifications of this resolution and the forces behind it are, of course, disturbing. Ottawa knows that quite apart from the criticism directed the government's way by Conservatives who may or may not be actuated by political expediency, there are many citizens of this country who are irked by the apparently slow and methodical prosecution of Canada's part in the war. We are up and doing type of people who prefer explosive action to quiet, steady pressure.

Strangely enough, most of this feeling of dissatisfaction with what Canada is doing is caused by the Germans. They haven't bombed England yet.

Canada's present war policy was strongly urged by Great Britain whose government visualized a terrific battle in the air with Hitler's blitzkrieg including a tremendous aerial bombardment of British industrial centres. Canada's role as a gigantic supply centre for the Allies was prompted by the same expectations which carried this Prime Minister of children from the cities to English rural districts, introduced an elaborate plan of black-out for all of England, and set up a system of home defense unsurpassed in her history.

THIS IT BECOMES REASONABLE to believe that Prime Minister King's government might well take a leaf from the note book of Lord Halifax. On Saturday last this British statesman took the occasion to answer critics in the homeland who complained about the elaborate precautions against air raids which have not come. Lord Halifax had two observations to make, first, that the absence of air raids might be explained by the very efficient defense set up, and second, that because there had been no big scale raid up to today was no reason why there would not be one tomorrow.

Let there be just one big air raid by Hitler's flyers, raining destruction on British industrial centres, and present feeling against the British-sponsored Canadian war policy would vanish overnight. Let there be a series of such raids, badly crippling English industries, and one would have to be in the shoes of certain impatient Canadians who have been advocating the rush of more and more Canadian troops to the front battle line instead of placing emphasis on factory and field production here at home.
