KEEPING FURNITURE UP TO PAR

During the winter it becomes necessary to give special care to furniture. Hot-dry rooms can dry out woods and even crack them.

From 40 to 60 per cent humidity in rooms is healthy for furniture. Don't place fine woods near hot radiators or fires, or near open windows.

Marred Surfaces
 As for scratches that so often seem to come from nowhere to mar fine surfaces, there is a tinted wax with enough wood stain added to cover these. It is quite satisfactory when polishing slightly damaged furniture. It comes in mahogany, walnut and light wood tints, to match most furniture.

If you have antiques or old pieces of furniture, group them with a mixture of two parts of turpentine to one part of linseed oil, or equal parts of turpentine, linseed oil and vinegar. Apply with a soft cloth and rub. Polish well with a dry cloth.

Wash Upholstery
 Upholstered furniture fabrics may be washed, if the tapestry, denim, rop or other covering is fast color. First, clean as thoroughly as possible by brushing with a stiff suds as follows: Shave and dissolve half a cake (or one cup of flakes) or any pure, neutral soap, in a quart of boiling water. Mix a small amount of this solution with a little cold water to beat to a stiff, dry cloth. Using this suds, scrub about a 10-inch circle of the surface at a time, using a stiff brush and rubbing with a rotary motion. The material should not be soaked or very wet. With a spatula scrape off all the latter possible, and then wipe with a damp sponge. Scrubbing again, pile fabrics as corduroy, velvet and velours will mat the surface. These fabrics should be brushed thoroughly with a soft brush against the nap when almost dry.

Sunday School Lesson
GOOD CITIZENS AND GOOD NEIGHBOURS

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1940.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." Matthew 22:39.

LESSON PASSAGE: Matthew 22: 16-22, 34-40.

And so the Word had breath and With human hands the creed of creeds In joveliness of perfect deed. More strong than all poetic thought. —Alfred, Lord Tennyson

HECKLING, 15.
 Christ was a teacher but his surroundings were far different from those of the modern classroom. He was not an accredited teacher, holding a university degree. He did not teach in any academic building but in the open air among the homes and synagogues. There could be no discipline imposed by official authority; he had either to interest his hearers or lose his audience. Some of his hearers were antagonistic and sought to entangle him in his talk. They failed because Christ's teaching came from his life. He was not following any text-book, setting forth other people's ideas. Christ taught out of his own personal experience of God and social relationships.

A Clever Catch Question, 16, 17.
 Always beware when people approach with flattery. Either they want something for themselves or they use flattery as a prelude to soften criticism or fault finding. The Pharisees and Herodians went to Jesus complimenting him upon the truth and fearlessness of his teaching. They recognized that he did not regard the person of men nor trim his teaching to suit the prejudices of his hearers. In verse 16, the visitors are paying compliments to Jesus as a teacher, but in verse 17, their trickery is seen. They sought to put Christ in a limbo. If he said that it was lawful to give tribute to Caesar, they would attack him before the Jews as disloyal. If he said it was unlawful to give tribute to Caesar, they would report him to the Romans as revolutionary. Doubtless they had spent many hours phrasing this catch question. They were to learn that truth does not always lie between exclusive alternatives.

Profound Answer, 18-22.
 The Pharisees and Herodians asked about taxation. Everyone is interested in taxation because it affects individual purses. Christ lifted the argument high above the financial aspect. He asked for a coin and drew their attention to Caesar's picture upon it. Christ could not logically avoid Caesar's taxes. Having solved this simple question of citizenship conduct, Christ turned to a weightier matter of the law. Were they giving obedience to God as readily as to Caesar? Paying taxes in money is much easier than living according to standards of ethics in harmony with the will of God. Paying a tax to the state is incidental, but the stewardship of all of life, our moral resources to the utmost. Christ's answer showed the Pharisees and Herodians the low level of life upon which they were living.

The Rating Habit, 34-36.
 In competitions of all sorts, contestants are rated first, second or third. The significant fact, however, is not the small shade of difference between the prize-winners, but that all are uniformly good. A first race may be decided by an inch, with only a fraction of a second's difference in the time record of the winners. We pay altogether too much attention to listing the things as first, second and third, and overlooking the high values in all. The Pharisees and Sadducees were greatly interested in the commandments. There were some six hundred rules and regulations and they wished to know which one Jesus placed first. Instead of finding out the motives for obeying the commandments, they wanted to decide questions of priority. Again Jesus showed his skill in answering questions. He listed the first and second commandments, showing two so important that they virtually included all the others. Conduct is not so simple as keeping one statutory commandment. It is the result of our total code of life. We need a spirit for life rather than a rule to be followed. The ineffectiveness of the Pharisees and Sadducees as religious leaders lay in the fact that they were classifying commandments instead of creating motives for obeying them.

Christ's Confidence in Love, 37-40.
 Christ listed two great commandments. The first is to love God with heart, soul and mind,—with all the heart, with all the soul and with all the mind. The second commandment is similar: "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." All the teaching of the law and the prophets can be summarized in these two commandments which in reality are one. Why did Christ have such confidence in love? The Roman Empire was built upon force. The Jewish Church trusted to tradition. 1000's of F. Johnson, 1000's R. W. Hall, 99's; A. W. Wilson, 99's; M. For Sniffles and Sneezes — Hot Lemonade

By BETTY BARCLAY

When Grandma prescribed hot lemonade for Grandpa's sniffles and sneezes, it was even then an old-fashioned remedy. Nobody knew the "reason why." Today lemonade is just as effective as ever in treating the common cold, and their prescription continues with the approval of modern medicine. At this time of year when colds and "flu" are prevalent, hot lemonade is "tops" on the drink list in many a home. Ever since Wu Lai wrote his "Lemon Hot Water Song" away back in the 13th century when the Yuan dynasty ruled China, folks have been drinking hot lemonade. But whereas the ancient Chinese boiled their lemon juice with sugar or honey to make what they called "Shi-li-pie," up-and-coming lemonade mixers today use fresh lemon juice, just as it is expressed from the lemons. For the vitamins which are potent elements in lemon juice lose some of their health value when cooked. Foodie people know — thanks to research workers — that it is better to pour hot water on fresh lemon juice to make hot lemonade. The wise housewife chooses clean-skinned fruit of fair size, since this is the greater economy in the end. Larger fruit gives more juice and clean skin assures good quality. For one glass of hot lemonade, take one lemon, two is better. Add one cup of boiling water and sweeten to taste. Honey is an excellent sweetening agent. Many persons find an "eye-opener" of lemon juice and water an excellent conditioner and cold preventive when made an early morning habit. This lemon juice bracer may be either warm or cold. As a cold preventive, a daily health drink of lemon juice and water with baking soda added is recommended. Taken first thing in the morning, or even just before retiring, lemon, soda and water helps regularly. It assists in maintaining normal alkalinity and gives the added protection of vitamin C, abundant in fresh lemon juice. For this healthful beverage, squeeze the juice of a lemon into a tall glass half full of water, put a half teaspoon of baking soda in another glass, pour back and forth and drink as the soothing subsides.

Questions for Discussion

1. Is your religion honest?
2. What were the secrets of Christ's impressive power as a teacher?
3. How has Canada succeeded in establishing good relationships between church and state?
4. Are we attaching more importance to law than to conscience?
5. Have you Christ's faith in the power of love?

TO KNOCK OUT A COLD

Taken really hot, not just warm, and without sugar, lemonade is unparalleled as a preventive and a remedy for cold. The important thing is to take it as soon as one detects the first symptoms of a cold. Sometimes one glass will suffice to chase the cold away. Experience has shown that this remedy is the best on earth. It is so absurdly simple that few people have faith in it, and prefer all sorts of expensive and unreliable formulae. This perhaps is just as well, for if they adopted the lemonade cure half the patent medicine firms in the country would go out of business, and a similar proportion of doctors would go on relief.
