The Red Shield War and Home Service Campaign

To the Citizens of Georgetown and vicinity:

Through our local press, by radio broadcasts and national advertising your attention is being drawn to the Salvation Army Red Shield War and Home Service Campaign March 11th to 20th.

As you know, the Salvation Army Huts, Canteens and Hostels rendered splendid service during the last war. On the outbreak of the present struggle plans for similar services were submitted to and accepted by the Dominion Government.

Some seventeen Recreation Huts have already been opened for soldiers and sailors in Canada, six for Canadian troops in training at Aldershot, and one hostel in London for soldiers on leave.

To assist the National Organization in raising funds to maintain this work, a general committee has been formed in Georgetown to arrange the details of the local canvas. In other communities mills and factories are organizing their own canvasses, and plans along the same lines are being worked out for Georgetown and vicinity. The business men's group will be canvassed by business men; and so forth.

We have no large training camps in the vicinity of Georgetown and opportunity to assist in the welfare of our soldiers is limited. It is through the medium of such campaigns as the above that we can express our willingness to do something for the social wellbeing of our soldiers, and help the Salvation Army to take the spirit of home into the midst of war.

The amount expected of Georgetown and vicinity is $500.00 and courtesies shown those authorized to canvass will be much appreciated.

It is not intended that the canvass be organized on a door to door basis, and anyone not contacted during the campaign who has in mind contributing, may leave his or her donation at Long's Store, Brown's Bakery, or with G. W. McLintock, Secretary-Treasurer, on behalf of the Committee.

W. E. Nodwell
Chairman.

WHEN SENDING PARCELS OVERSEAS

To the Editor,
Georgetown Herald.

Dear Sir:
I noticed an item in the Herald last week regarding sending of parcels to soldiers overseas. I have had a little experience in the same thing, as I was in India, Burma, Arabia and South Africa, and I sent quite a number of parcels to relatives and friends. I find the best way is to get a piece of old sheeting—you don't need any twine—just sew the parcel up. It is very easy to print the address and the stamps will stick on.

Hoping this will be a help to some one sending parcels overseas.

Yours truly,
A. Hyde.

GEORGE C. ATKINS
Candidate in Halton for the National Government Party.

To the People of Halton:

Colonel George Drew is one of Canada's distinguished soldiers, an authority on munitions. He wrote a record of Canada's air achievements in the Great War that is an invaluable source of information. He exposed the international munitions ring and its part in frustrating peace and fostering war. He suffered serious injuries in rendering distinguished service to his country. He knows war. He is determined that nothing shall be left undone that will aid and protect our men.

As a good Canadian, Colonel Drew desired to tell the people of Canada how perilously poor our war preparation had been, how imperative it is that we organize our utmost effort for victory. His radio speech was censored. The government that would tell parliament the truth refused to let Colonel George Drew tell it over the radio.

It is true that Colonel Drew's facts were a grave exposure of the failure of the government but it was in your interest and mine, the public interest, that they should be known to every Canadian.

The following portions of his censored remarks are taken from the Globe and Mail. They were addressed directly to Mr. King:

"The peace establishment of our land forces is six divisions.

"The weapons of the infantry come first. Our infantry was armed with rifles brought back to Canada from the Great War. They were obsolete and we had not nearly enough to train our present establishment. The only machine guns on issue to our militia units were also obsolete relics of the Great War. The handful of Bren guns in Canada were inadequate even for training purposes and all were made either in England or Czechoslovakia. Not one was on issue to the volunteer militia units when war came.

"Our field artillery did not possess a single modern weapon. In spite of some changes and the addition of rubber tires, the eighteen-pounders of our field artillery were not even the last model of the Great War. We had less than half the number even of those obsolete weapons which were required for our present establishment. I can take back to at least one unit, Mr. King, who is trying to train today with a twelve-pounder made for the South African War.

"In the whole of Canada we had four anti-aircraft guns which could have been used against modern aircraft. They arrived from England last year and were not of the latest pattern.

"Our tank battalions were without tanks. You know that we have a small number of obsolete machines at Camp Borden and that your Government would not even supply the necessary technical equipment so that these tanks could be used for instructional purposes.

"Our mechanized cavalry was without mechanical equipment of any kind.

"Others are drilling with only a hall or a quarter of the number of weapons they require.

"Our snipers rest the full responsibility for the fact that our defense forces have practically no modern weapons of any kind.

"Now we come to that part of the story which explains how little the War Supply Board can really do to overcome the inefficiency of your Government.

"The twenty-eight aircraft were finished some months ago. The National Steel Car Corporation did a splendid job. But it was not their duty to order the engines. When the aircraft were finished, it was found that the Government had ordered only twenty engines, and eight of those machines are still at the Malton plant without engines simply because the Department of National Defense forgot to order the engines from England until last December.

"The best evidence of that is the fact that, although our land forces were without modern weapons when war began, no new order has been placed in Canada during six months of war for the weapons that we need so badly.

"You (Mr. King) are aware that the only pursuit ships we had in Canada then were five ancient Sopwith-Glenns which had been obsolete for at least ten years and had a top speed of 146 miles an hour. Those were the machines with which you were going to give advanced training to men who would be called upon to handle fighters with a speed of 400 miles an hour."

"The truth is coming out. The whole truth will be revealed after the election. Just as the truth about Beaumont and the Valley of Humiliation came out after the 1930 election, Mr. King did not go to the people with his record. He went to the people, but most of his record lies buried beneath the wreckage of the rights of parliament. What has been unearthed is not good.

"Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, M.C., in true British fashion, offered his full cooperation to Mr. King when war was declared. Flouting British practice under which Mr. Chamberlain consults the leaders of the opposition in important matters, Mr. King ignored Dr. Manion and parliament.

Dr. Manion says, "I will fight for

ELECTION BUREAU BUSY

In view of the fact that there will be no acclamations, and in certain ridings the contest may produce a variety of aspirants, the election bureau in Ottawa is one of the busiest departments in the nation's capital at the present time. Though the officials were actually ready to face an election last fall, which would have been held but for the outbreak of the war, the unusual flood of candidates, and the revision or consolidation of the Dominion Elections Act in the regular session has brought many new problems or situations as an aftermath of the new features and reforms of the election machinery, being especially burdensome for the higher officials. The moment of the operations is moving daily as the time for the polling comes nearer and nearer, and now a small army of men and women are engaged in this work, with the bulk of these workers being on the public pay roll as returning officers, deputies, poll clerks, enumerators, constables, and other reaching the figure of about 150,000, if the far-flung units are included. Of course it is almost impossible to estimate the number of political workers engaged in the elections and remunerated by the various political parties, but there is no doubt that their number is great.

The Federal Treasury expects to spend about two and a half million dollars, and this is not an increase in cost in face of the big soldiers' vote because considerable savings will be effected through the repeal of the Franchise Act. The nature of the campaigns of the various parties is unknown and beyond estimation, though the official agents are supposed to make a sworn return of the expenses of the candidate. However, their knowledge is limited and in many cases both agent and candidate do not know exactly the outlays involved in the campaigns of their parties in the national sphere.

PROGNOSTICATIONS OF THE ELECTIONS

If straws show which way the wind is blowing, it is apparent to the political observer on Parliament Hill that he can attach special significance to certain reports from well-informed and strictly impartial observers throughout the whole nation who are able to uncover the opinion of the man in the street or to disclose the trend of public opinion in this feverish electoral campaign.

Mr. King says that neither he nor his ministers will co-operate with Dr. Manion if they are defeated. How could he say more plainly, "the price of my patriotism is power."

My whole purpose is to preserve democracy. I promise you that I will co-operate with everyone, under all circumstances, to ensure victory.

Produce—all we can.
Give—all we can.
Serve—all we can.

THAT'S WHY OUR COAL IS TRADEMARKED

All hard coals look alike—even if they don't all burn alike. But when we send you a load of Famous Reading Anthracite, you know it's the one and only "Famous Reading," because it's trademarked with red spots that won't rub off. Let us fill your bin with this lauded coal—the low ash anthracite that's as nearly 100% pure as can be produced.
