To Whom It May Concern
For the information of the public, and in the interests of child welfare, we publish the following extract from the Minors' Protection Act of Ontario. The reason for this legislation may be found in the Ontario Public School Health Book, Page 106: "Tobacco and its smoke contain powerful poisons, and therefore its use, especially by the young, is harmful." Page 108: "Since the use of tobacco is a handicap or hindrance to one in his work and in his play, it is best for those to avoid it who desire really to enjoy life, and to make the most of themselves. Many are born with handicaps... Others acquire some handicap through illness or accident... But those who acquire a handicap through smoking, do so as a result of their own folly."

Union Government Not-Needed

(The Financial Post)
The Financial Post, one of the most outspoken critics of the King Government, has the following to say in a recent issue:
"The Financial Post has consistently opposed national or 'union' government as a cure for Canada's political ills. At the outset of the present war we reiterated this view and said: 'Nothing in past history or in current political experience supports the view that because Canada is at war, union or national government is essential.'
"On the contrary, there is as yet no sufficient reason for scrapping the two-party system and sacrificing parliamentary freedom 'in the early years of the last war, the Opposition played an important role in checking waste and extravagance of a type which war breeds so easily. Had it been even 'nothing in past history or in current political experience supports the view that because Canada is at war, union or national government is essential.'
"Happenings since September confirm this view. The war has produced as yet no emergency that cannot be handled by a strong government under the two-party system, and more than by a union, bi-party administration."
If the time should come when a decisive radical, religious or sectional issue is raised which cannot be settled by the two-party system, national well-being, then a union cabinet may be necessary. Even then union government should only be used to settle that specific issue. It should not be retained once the emergency has passed.
So far, such an emergency has not arisen. Canada has shown itself strong and united in her war effort. When a threat to national unity did arise in Quebec last October, the issue was faced not by resort to a "union" of the two parties but by the strong, courageous leadership of the Liberal party under the Minister of Justice, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, and Hon. Adolphe Godbout, now premier of Quebec. Had Mr. Lapointe and Mr. Godbout not been successful, a crisis might have arisen that would have necessitated a "national" or union appeal to ensure a united war effort. That eventually has not happened. Dr. Manion, for the Conservatives, has offered a vague plan of "national" government. The plan is misleading if it is confused in people's minds with union government, which it is not. Dr. Manion makes the promise of a "best brain" cabinet if, as and when his party is returned to power. While some good men have offered themselves as candidates, Dr. Manion himself has not yet inspired confidence in his ability to produce a cabinet of strong, united leadership.
Dr. Manion has not even done a good job as leader of the Opposition. He has done this he would not be so dependent on material dug up by others for his allegations of incompetence and extravagance.

Under union or national government, which implies the two-party system, the healthy, alert scrutiny of public administration is either weakened or disappears entirely. Where there is a strong cabinet leadership, spurred by a vigorous, constructive Opposition, there is assurance of a manly war effort.
That, in brief, is the dominating issue in this election.
It is not a question of so-called national or "union" government where party lines disappear to unite in a war effort.
It is a question of producing from this election the strongest cabinet that Canada can muster, first at the same time retaining a vigorous alert opposition.

NAVY LEAGUE SEA CADET CORPS NEWS
Of the 15,000 Ontario teen-age boys who have enjoyed the benefits of training in The Navy League Sea Cadet Corps, more than 1,600 are already on active service in Canada's merchant marine and Canada's navy.
This was the announcement made by the Navy League of Canada, Ontario Division.
More than $300,000 has been provided through public subscription and used in the training of our Sea Cadets, officers of the Navy League declared, "and we have no record of a single cadet ever appearing in a Juvenile Court. This is good evidence of the valuable training and discipline received."
Sault Ste. Marie, Windsor, Port William, Port Arthur, St. Thomas, Welland, St. Catharines, Oshawa, Ottawa, Toronto and Hamilton are among the communities boasting active Navy League Sea Cadet Corps. Presently, Toronto has the largest single Sea Cadet Corps in the British Empire, having more than doubled its strength in the past year. The Hamilton Corps of Navy League Sea Cadets is on record as the first unit in this country to adopt the "form three" which has replaced the "form four" of old-time military training.
Typical of the value of the Sea Cadet's program is this story told at Navy League headquarters, of one Hamilton lad who applied for admission to the R.C.M.V.P. He was refused because he was only 17, but determined to join some active unit, he kept on trying and was subsequently accepted as a member of one of the infantry regiments.
"Can you form three?" his new superior officers promptly asked him to which the chap replied that he could. "Then take this squad out and put them through their drills."
That accomplished satisfactorily, the new recruit was faced with a Lewis gun and told to take it apart and put it together, blindfolded, within five minutes. Did he do it? He did!
Today, he wears two stripes on his sleeve, which, as his former mates agree, is "nice going for any 18-year-old Sea Cadet."

Canada at War

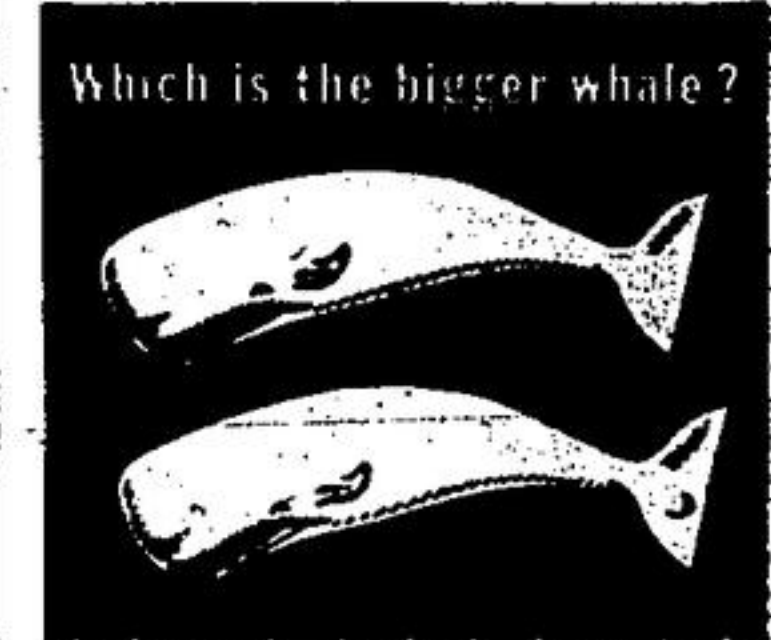

(Issued by Censor)
Smuggling Attempts In Internment Camps Hit by Regulations
It has been made a punishable offense under the War Regulations Act to smuggle letters, newspapers, clippings and other articles in or out of Internment Camps in Canada, according to an order issued recently by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Acting Secretary of State. This became necessary after various attempts were made to evade camp censorship. Contravention of this order will be punished on summary conviction by a fine not exceeding $500 or twelve months imprisonment. Conviction under indictment allows for a fine not exceeding $5,000 or five years imprisonment.

Wastage is Avoided Through Creation of Central Directorate
To avoid duplication of effort and wastage in the welfare activities on behalf of Canada's enlisted men, the Directorate of Auxiliary Services has been created in the Department of National Defence. Well over two hundred charitable organizations, well-known to Canadians, come under its supervision.
The Directorate of Auxiliary Service is a military organization. It operates under the Adjutant-General and is subject to military rules of discipline. It aims to avoid the mistakes of the Great War, when wastage resulted from lack of central direction in the Auxiliary Services of the Dominion.
It is the duty of the Directorate to insure that welfare and comforts provided by charitable organizations are administered fairly among all branches of the services. Its staff consists of a Director, responsible for administration of services in Canada, England and France, an assistant director and an auxiliary service officer in each military district in Canada. Through this organization the gap between the armed forces of Canada and civilian organizations working for their welfare is bridged and efficient co-operation is made possible.
Welfare organizations are playing a big part in Canada's war effort. They have relieved the government of a costly and complicated duty. They own and maintain buildings and equipment valued in the hundreds of thousand dollars. These are at the disposal of the troops at no cost to the Government. Through these organizations, Canadian patriotism and the will to serve, evinced throughout the Dominion, have been mobilized and directed into practical channels of service. The whole welfare structure in Canada is based on voluntary service. Under supervision of the Directorate of Auxiliary Services each organization is given its equitable bit to provide the troops in the field with necessities and comforts and prepare them for the day when they will return to civil life.
