JONAH: THE OUTREACH OF GOD'S LOVE

SUNDAY, JUNE 30th, 1940.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Salvation is of the Lord." Jonah 3:9.

LESSON PASSAGE: Jonah 3:1-10; 4:10, 11.

Let the Forces of Light bring illumination to mankind. Let the Spirit of Peace be spread abroad. May men of good will everywhere meet in a spirit of co-operation. May forgiveness on the part of all men be the keynote at this time. Let power attend the efforts of the Brothers of Humanity. So let it be and help us do our part.

Guidance, 12. In a world dangerously near committing suicide through nationalism, are untimely. This book tells of the love of God. The prophet Jonah had to learn the lesson in life before his narrative could teach it to his fellow men. The book of Jonah is, in some ways, the keynote at this time. It is one thing to desire peace; it is another to give it. We must be worthy of our peace. Repent should be the word on the lips of all the churches. In the New Testament, peace is always associated with other qualities — righteousness, truth, justice — and this idea runs through the whole Biblical revelation. In any nation where some people have meat every day and others have it once a week or not at all, anything is likely to happen. There is a stern element in our religion and we forget it to our cost. We must accept the discipline of God. God's love was not shown in any easy way. The Cross reveals the final purpose of God."

Deliverance, 18. The Ninevites repented and were protected, yet Jonah was unhappy. He despised the Ninevites because they did not belong to his race or religion and secretly he was sorry they were not destroyed. It was this Pharisaic nationalism that limited the appeal of the Jewish religion. It is the same exaltation of nationalism that is causing conflict amongst the nations of today. Totalitarian states base their theories upon the same loveless and narrow-hearted nationalism that the book of Jonah condemned. No civilized human beings would in cold blood bomb refugee men, women and children from the air, except when driven to it by a misguided nationalism. On the other hand, neutrality and isolationism are an expression of the Jewish self-interest also. The Christian religion teaches us that we must take into account the welfare of the whole world. Just as history tells of the union of tribes into nations, so there must be a coming together of nations, to provide world government and protection.

Compassion, 10, 11. The greatest lesson of the book is skilfully reserved to the end, vv. 2, 10, 11. It is that God is patient and merciful that He loves all the world which He created. That His love stretches not only beyond the Jews and away to distant Nineveh, but even down to the animal creation. He hears the cries of the foreign sailors. He delights in the repentance of Nineveh. He cares for the cattle, lv. 11. This book is the Old Testament counterpart to "God so loved the world." This lesson should not be taught as a mere Sunday school lesson. The principles needed in the world today. We live in an international situation where religious division, race prejudices and national ambition threaten human progress. Is there any power to rebuild the old world and to build a new and better world except the gospel of the love of God for all mankind?

Repentance, 5-9. Jonah's word brought quick results. The people of Nineveh did repent, in the hope that their city might avoid destruction. A Canadian recently gave the same message in these words "God doesn't step in when we drown our civilization in seas of blood. It is one thing to desire peace; it is another to give it. We must be worthy of our peace. Repent should be the word on the lips of all the churches. In the New Testament, peace is always associated with other qualities — righteousness, truth, justice — and this idea runs through the whole Biblical revelation. In any nation where some people have meat every day and others have it once a week or not at all, anything is likely to happen. There is a stern element in our religion and we forget it to our cost. We must accept the discipline of God. God's love

Hugh Scott, sister of the bride, was in blue

Swiss voile. They wore flowers in their hair and carried marguerites. Wes Richardson was best man and the ushers were Grenfell Wright and Grant Wright, brothers of the bride.

WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES ISSUED WITH SPEED AND ACCURACY. On the second floor of the Bank of Canada building in Ottawa has just been set up a series of mechanical rolls which do everything but speak and think.

Installed for the purpose of handling all applications for War Savings Certificates, with speed and accuracy, these machines are operated by a specially trained staff of some forty people and can handle up to 10,000 applications, and issue as many certificates in a single day.

When an application for a War Savings Certificate is received at the Bank of Canada, the envelope is not opened in the usual way by an official, but is opened with a blunt knife. Certainly not. The job is done in the modern manner — with a machine. This envelope opener looks something like a bacon slicer and slits through scores of envelopes in the twinkling of an eye.

From this "opening machine" the application with its remittance is passed to a staff of checkers who see to it that the amount of your remittance agrees with the sum stated on your application form. The money is then turned over to the teller and the application form to a staff of girls who operate a battery of "punching machines."

These machines look like typewriters but they are far more than that. Into them are fed special cards. On these cards the girls type the name and address of the registered owner shown on the application form, as well as the number and value of the certificate applied for.

But while the operator is typing this information along the top of the card, the machine at the same time is transcribing it in the form of small oblong slits which are automatically punched in the middle of the card as quickly as the operator can type. These slits perform the same function as the dots and dashes on an old-fashioned music roll.
