K. R. McALPINE BURIED HERE THURSDAY
Kenneth Russell McAlpine passed away in Hamilton on Monday, October 21st, after an illness of two-and-a-half years. He was born near Georgetown, and lived for several years in Milton prior to his illness. He was highly respected in the building trades, and attended the United Church. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Dixon McAlpine, of Georgetown, one sister, Jean, of Georgetown, and two brothers, Norman, at Limehouse, and Gordon, at Georgetown. Mr. McAlpine was in his 80th year.
The funeral service was held in Georgetown on Thursday, and was conducted by Rev. F. C. Overend, pastor of Georgetown United Church. Pallbearers were John Bell, O. E. Knight, Charles Anderson and Frank Middleton, of Milton, Arthur Benton, Limehouse, and Harry Logan, Georgetown. Interment was in Greenwood Cemetery, Georgetown.

BALLINAFAD

Mr. Henry Hills and Mr. J. P. Kirk-wood, who are members of the Geor-getown unit of the Halton Civil Guard, attended the church parade held in Milton on Sunday.

The W.M.S. held their open meet-ing on Wednesday at the home of Miss B. Hills. A special invitation had been extended to all women of the com-munity and was well responded to. After the opening exercises Mrs. F. J. Spelght, of Georgetown, were welcome visitors at our meeting.

THE SNAPSHOT GUILD

SUSPENSE IN PICTURES

Suspense makes this picture interesting—and situations of this type are easy to create. Try your hand at "suspense shots"—both "singles" and "series." It's good camera fun.

SUSPENSE—the feeling that "something is about to happen"—makes a picture interesting. Watch for situations that involve suspense—or create the situations yourself—and you'll find a sure route to effective pictures.

A situation doesn't have to be complicated or out of the ordinary. In fact, everyday situations are usually better. A shot of the cat watching the canary—a man blowing up a toy balloon—somebody building a house of cards—all these are good, and you can think of many others.

Such pictures are interesting because you can see the "trouble ahead" signal. You anticipate the moment when the balloon will burst, or the house of cards will topple. And, for picture purposes, the anticipation is often better than the actual event.

Of course, it's a shame to waste a really good "suspense" idea on just one picture. To get the full force and flavor of the situation, make a series. Build up the sus-pense, picture by picture—then re-lieve it, by showing what finally happens.

For example, take that house-of-cards idea. Shoot one picture right at the start, when the first two cards are placed—then two or three more pictures as the house grows, story by story. And last, when it collapses, show your subject looking at the debris, with a startled or disappointed expression. If you have a small son or daughter, who can build the card house, this series will be a "natural" for your album. Or, try it with Uncle John as the subject.

Again, take the cat and the gold-fish—as shown above—for the start of a "suspense series." Just put your aquarium on a table in the sun—and the cat will provide the necessary drama. Shoot each good pose as it occurs—then arrange the shots in the best order. This series, of course, would wind up with a final shot just as the cat loses interest and starts to jump off the table.

Try your hand at suspense pic-tures—both "singles" and "series" shots. They're easy to get, and the situations are easily created. And such shots do lend great interest to your picture collection.
