SPORT SHORTS

By Sideliner

Arlor Dills, editor of the Acton Free Press, is trying his best to stimulate hockey in the neighborhood this year. Apparently the Arena is being used for local troop training, but Arlor thinks there are other places which would do just as well. "For ten years," he says, "Acton has built up a reputation for being a hockey centre. Are the results of all this ten years of building to be lost in a year?"

Meanwhile, we hear that Allan Marshall is playing Senior O.P.A. with Hamilton this year. A Long-Hill day for Scotty Rankine, Preston native, and a member of the South Waterloo Harriers, who finished first for the fourth time in the annual Around-the-Bay Marathon in Hamilton. And we mustn't forget the annual long distance boys, Bill Collier and Johnny Emmerson, who finished fourth and thirteenth respectively, and helped bring the team prize to Gladstone A. O.

The handsome shield drawn much in the Herald window this week. Sharp-shooting Georgetown hunters are making things hot for the deer. Ed McWhirter spent a recent holiday in search of a tasty meal in the Herald window this week. Jack Orlinton had the only luck so far reported, and is having out slabs of venison to all his friends. Bill McDowell joined friends from Brampton in a northern trek. Harold McClure and G. W. McLintock left for Port Sydney early Sunday morning.

This misprint from a Sydney, Australia, newspaper interview with the tenor, Richard Tauber, is amusing. "(A singer's) throat becomes hot; he goes into a cold air; and, before he knows what has happened, he has caught a chill and cannot sing for a fortnight."

Dr. Agnew has become well-known through his discoveries in dental science and through his educational work on the mission field. The evening service will be conducted by the minister at 7 o'clock. Sunday school and Bible classes will meet at ten o'clock.

YOUR GREETING CARDS

Easy to make with scissors and paste, a headline greeting makes a striking, effective, individual card. You'll find other ideas below.

CHRISTMAS means greeting cards — and for some of us, so does New Year's. I personally am in favor of both — because it's fun to create unusual cards, and two occasions offer twice as many opportunities as one.

Naturally, my cards are made with the camera — for there's nothing more personal than a good photographic greeting. In recent years, I have always tried to get the greeting right in the picture, along with some member of the family — or all of us. There are many novel methods of doing this, and most of them are quite easy.

For example, once we carefully stamped out the letters "Merry Christmas" in the new-fallen snow on the lawn. It was a sunny day, and late in the afternoon when the sun was low the letters showed up quite well, because of the shadows in them. We shot the picture, with the family and the house in the background — and there was our card.

Another time, we had a snow man in front of the house, holding a placard. He was striking in favor of merrier Christmases for everybody, and snow the year 'round.

Once back when Ann was a baby, we took her alphabet blocks and built a greeting with them. She appeared in the picture, of course, holding a block in her hand. Everybody liked that card so well we repeated it the next year, with variations. We took three pictures — each with an alphabet block message — saying "Merry Christmas," "From Ann," "And The Family." These were printed on special thin photographic paper, to make a double fold or "French fold" type of card. Any photofinisher can show you the right kind of paper, and how the card is planned.

Then one year we pictured Jack as a sandwich man, advertising merrier Christmases. We have also made newspaper paste-ups with big headlines for the greeting — very effective in an over-the-shoulder shot. A friend of ours has used that same idea for his New Year's cards this time; they're already made, and ready to mail when the time comes.

Among those ideas, you'll doubtless find a thought for your own photographic card this year. I'll offer just one suggestion. Keep the card simple, and do it early. Christmas has a way of slipping up on us — and you don't want your greetings to get stuck in the holiday rush.
