ROBBED AGAIN

Your telephone says you are busy, but it isn't true!

Maybe you are robbed of an evening's fun. Perhaps an important business call can't reach you. Your telephone is gagged because of the "off the hook" habit.

Last year, Bell Telephone repair men found 120,400 trouble calls in the seven largest cities of Ontario and Quebec to be just plain "off the hook" troubles!

It's a real menace to efficiency, especially in war-time when telephone service must be fast and dependable. You can help by always replacing the telephone carefully. Let's keep our lines of communication clear!

M.O.H. REPORT FOR JULY

In the last stages is an epidemic of mumps which caused the past few months. The report for July, issued by Dr. C. V. Williams, Medical Officer of Health for Georgetown, lists four cases—the same number as in the month of June. Also in July, one case of whooping cough was reported the first and we hope the last of the year for this nasty disease.

Following is the complete report:

Scarlet Fever	0
Chickenpox	0
Measles	0
German Measles	0
Mumps	4
Infantile Paralysis	0
Typhoid Fever	0
Whooping-Cough	1
Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis	0

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM Sunday School LESSON

PETER ENCOURAGES SUFFERING CHRISTIANS
SUNDAY, AUGUST 17th, 1941

GOLDEN TEXT: "If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf." 1 Peter 4: 16.

LESSON PASSAGE: 1 Peter 4: 12-19; 5: 6-11.

"I know that Christ had given me birth. To brother all the souls on earth."

Sharing Suffering, 12, 13.

Picture the historical situation in the first century. Christian men and women were scattered abroad. The Jews were antagonistic towards them and the pagans laughed at them. When Peter sought to comfort them he stressed the fact that they were partakers of Christ's suffering. The servants were not greater than their Lord. Christ had been despised and rejected of men and his followers passed through the same experience. Because of this fellowship in suffering, Peter dared to speak of joy in the same breath as he spoke of trial. In studying these words of Peter we do not forget the tradition that he was martyred and that he was crucified, head down, seeking to atone for his denial. Peter is not writing a polite essay to elaborate a theory. From the day he had left his fishing boat he had been challenged and had received many taunts. "Through it all he was upheld by the conviction that he was sharing the suffering of Christ."

Suffering As Christians

In the early years of this century Canadians were very jaunty. The world looked good to us, immigrants were pouring into Canada and our hopes were high. We spoke of building a Christian world. Yet today there is much opposition to Christianity in Japan. Certain groups in China resist it. Many people in India will have nothing to do with it. And on the continent of Europe, from Vladivostok to the English Channel, from New York to Athens and Rome, there is opposition to the Christian way of life. There are many people in interment camps solely because they are Christians. Their imprisonment is an honour rather than a disgrace. They are reproached for the name of Christ and they are happy to follow in his train. It may be that the Christian Church will go through a period of persecution and martyrdom. Such a period has already arrived in many countries. Can we meet persecution with faith and hope?

A Spiritual Experience, 17-19.

Peter taught that inner character is much more important than outward circumstances. We ought to be judging ourselves. If we do this courageously and honestly, it may be that we shall escape judgment from others. Christ never promised that discipleship would be easy; rather did he state frankly that it would require heroism and endurance. The only way in which we may live victoriously during the dark days through which we are passing, is to make it a spiritual experience. A religious leader who endured bombing under the past, issued on concrete under a stairs, states that on the surface the world appears to be chaos. Any materialistic philosophy fails to rationalize the world as we know it; only a spiritual interpretation gives light. In the presence of death we believe the more in immortality. We may fear those who can destroy the body, but much more should we be afraid of those who can kill the soul. The world can not be made good by force nor, we believe, can it ever be made wholly bad by force. In the midst of our difficulties we learn to trust God more fully.

Living Under Discipline, 6-9.

In these weeks when human lives are being sacrificed by the thousands, two courses of action are possible. Some turn to dissipation and others turn to God. Even in bombed cities night clubs are busy, following the philosophy, "Eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow we may die." Others say that because of the brevity and uncertainty of life they will live it nobly. They humble themselves before God. They put their trust in Christ. They are alert and vigilant, guarding against temptation. They see the frustrated, futile lives of those who have yielded to self-indulgence, and they decide to live under discipline. People living in air-raid shelters in Old London have discovered how to live without complaining, without quarrelling and without losing faith. An Englishman, who thinks of the world as "the vale of soul-making" says: "The earth life has not been wasted if it is only a preparatory school and if the university course of the soul lies completely in the next—or spiritual—phase of life." One lady writing from the Ok Lawa said to a Canadian relative: "Please do not send any more food; we do not want to have more than our neighbors." A young woman said concerning her soldier-lover: "I don't pray for his safety only that he remain brave and unstained and do his job. He must take the risks the others take." One cannot feel pity for people who meet adversity in that way.

Peter's Benediction, 10, 11.

Read over and over again 1 Peter 5, verses 10 and 11. The author of these words is an apostle who, as a disciple, was a weak waverer, impulsive and heady. At last he had become a rock. He had fulfilled Christ's prediction for him. He encouraged his readers to expect victory. He told them that Christ could make them perfect. From Christ they could receive strength to face their dangers and to meet death triumphantly. The God of all grace has called us and will sustain us to the end no matter what fiery trials we may have to endure. Hardships make strong characters. Too much sunshine is as bad for a flower

TIMELY TOPICS FOR WOMEN

By Barbara Baines

BUSY CHILDREN ARE HAPPY CHILDREN

"How many of you parents find it a problem to keep your children busy and happy during the long summer vacation? How often have you heard them say in a bored voice, 'What will I do now, Mum?' At school they were accustomed to a regular routine, and the days seem very hard to fill up now that they have no definite job to do. What is the solution? I guess you will be interested, but that is something easier said than done.

Few children in this country lack the opportunity for free play in the fresh air and sunshine, which is, of course, essential. But a great many of them do lack an opportunity for creative work under competent and encouraging supervision. Authorities on child training agree that our modern children are not taught to use their hands enough, and they are taught too late. All children need to learn early the joy of doing things... the satisfaction of accomplishing something, and terms of praise and wages.

Take the case of Elsa. Elsa was home over the Civic holiday on her first leave since she went to a fruit farm in the Niagara district as a farmette. 'This summer has been tops... the most fun I've ever had,' she said in talking to a group of friends. 'I have never seen so much fruit and so many vegetables in my whole life, and they are taught too late. It is amazing how quickly it responds to regular care.'

Most women like to have their hair cut fairly short before they get their summer permanent. It is then both easier to manage and cooler on hot days. Simpler coiffures are predicted for this winter, through which you can run a comb quickly and look well at a moment's notice. The trend is toward a wider, look with the hair brushed up from the ears. Women find they are too busy to be bothered with long bobs and elaborate hairdos.

FOR OUR SCRAP BOOK

It was only a glad "good morning" As she passed along her way; But it spread the morning's glory Over the livelong day.

BOOK REVIEW

"I Was a Nazi Flier"

—By Gottfried Leske

(Longmans, Green, 351pp. $3.00)

"I Was a Nazi Flier" is one of the most unusual books published this season. It is based on the diary of a young flier in the Luftwaffe, who is now a prisoner in a concentration camp in Canada.

His diary, which was never intended for publication, begins with the strafing of women and children on the roads when Holland and Belgium were invaded, and covers all his activities until the time when he was shot down over England and captured. In it he tells some very significant and damning facts regarding German psychology and military life.

Leske is a typical young Nazi who joined Hitler's youth movement back in 1929, and later belonged to the Elite Guard. If he ever had any doubts, he cast them aside with this thought, "The Fuehrer knows best," and anyway it is wiser as the Gestapo might happen on his diary.

He records the bombing of the beach at Dunkirk and the "luck of the English" in getting away; his disdain for the French; the razing of Rotterdam and Coventry; the preparation for the invasion of England; and his glee in the bombing of London.

He tells of his infatuation with Liesolette and his later disillusionment; how the Gestapo checks even upon the bomber pilots; and of a visit from Goering.

Leske glories in destruction and killing. He is bombastic and egotistical as shown when he says "We Germans always are amazing the world... Everything important has been invented by us." Readers will be interested in the picture he reveals of the warped mentality of the Nazis, and the ruthlessness with which they treat even their own people.

HOW MUCH CARE DO YOU GIVE YOUR HAIR?

When you hear it said that a certain woman is well-groomed, what comes to your mind first? Some think of her clothes, their fashion and fit; others of her complexion and make-up; still others of her shoes, gloves and other accessories. But when I hear that a woman is well-groomed I think of her hair, glistening with health, beautifully cut and styled.

As too much shadow. All sunshine makes a desert. The example of Christ himself encourages us. He was perfect by suffering. We may share his victory, "If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed."

Questions for Discussion

1. Is the Christian Church facing another martyr period?
2. Why are the dictators antagonistic to Christ?
3. Are we capable of judging ourselves?
4. Are my present temptations the roaring lion or subtle snake variety?
5. Write a wartime benediction.
