G.H.S. COLUMN

Three cheers, G.H.S. goes over the top! The results of the War Savings drive of Nov. 14 is one hundred and ten per cent for the school. Each Form contributed generously to the cause and the results are as follows:
 Form V—206 1-3%
 Form IV—130%
 Form IA—104 1-3%
 Form III—100%
 Form IB—100%
 Form II—93 1-3%
Our War Work
 Several of the pupils, eager to do knitting for ex-pupils of G.H.S. have been given wool. More have signed up to do their bit. Those who are not versed in the knitting of socks are to be helped over their difficulties by the teachers.

Baseball
 The end of the baseball season found School Leade's team victorious in the inter-school competition. The games were packed full of excitement and were a great effort and certainly a great spirit. As a result, the team were closely match-

Basketball
 The last basketball game ending the series was played on Nov. 12th. The struggle for championship took place between Ruth Goldham's and Eleanor Millere's teams. Needless to say with the above teams in action the game was an exciting one. Eleanor Millere and her fellow team-mates deserve credit for the excellent way in which they carried off the title.

Former Pupil Communicates with G.H.S.
 Allen Young, a former student of G.H.S. now studying at Trenton, was thrilled to learn that G.H.S. was carrying on so well in all activities. Incidentally, he wished he were back at G.H.S.

The Georgetown Soldiers' Committee has received word that the last consignment of cigarettes sent to district men overseas has arrived safely.

Owing to a mistake at the Legion bingo on Saturday, Nov. 15th, only 13 games were called instead of 15. On Saturday, Nov. 22nd, there will be 17 games called.

Group 4 of the Women's Association of Georgetown United Church will hold a sale of home-made baking in the McGibbon Block on Saturday, Nov. 29th, at 3 p.m.

Correction—The bag of potatoes, acknowledged in last week's Herald, as a donation from Mrs. D. J. Sinclair to the Up-to-You sale, should have been credited to John F. Sinclair.

Too bad! Just when we had a nice juicy bit of scandal for our readers, the parties involved made an out-of-court settlement. Now we'll have to settle back and report the hum-drum little affairs of the community and forget about all those extra papers we might have sold.

The Norval Junior Institute and Junior Farmers will hold their annual church service in Norval United Church on Sunday, Nov. 30th, at 7.30 p.m. Rev. T. Hart of Woodstock will be guest speaker. Miss Joy Ruddle and Mr. Hartley Anderson will be the soloists. Collection in aid of the British War Victims' Fund.

A public lecture, "God's Word in Foreign Lands," will be given by Rev. Walter M. Cherry, B.A., in Georgetown Baptist Church on Thursday, Nov. 20th, 8 p.m. This is in connection with the annual meeting of the Georgetown Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society. The public is cordially invited.

Two Keys to a Cabin

"It's like listening to a sea-shell," Gay said. Her head, resting against John's shoulder, lifted so that their eyes met and held.

"You're crying," he said.
 "Am I?"
 "Why do you cry?"

"Because I'm so blissful. Because sometime you may die or I may." She laughed softly. "I don't know."
 "Darling! Sweet! Are you sure?"
 "Oh John, yes!"

"It might be because we're here. The lake, the cabin—This is the setting that's most—" He broke off with a diffident laugh, then continued. "The setting that's most—becoming to me. Will you love me in—"

"September as I do in May."
 "I meant it—when we're together in New York?"

"Oh darling, yes! In Venice or Shanghai or—Baltimore."
 "Why Baltimore?"
 "We're going to live there."
 "Oh, are we?"

"You've been telling me for a week that you want to do research at Johns Hopkins. Well—?"

"You're a practical young lady, aren't you? I haven't been able to think beyond this moment, now. I may not be able to get in at Hopkins."

"I think you will. My grandfather gave the hospital an endowment. He had an operation there. It can be arranged."

His arms relaxed. "His" head turned. She gave a little cry.

"I know what you're thinking. Oh, John, don't! Why shouldn't I help you? I love you. Everything will be not for you nor for me but for us."

He turned to her. "I'm sorry," he said. "It's just that—I can't believe any of it—you, us, being here. I can't realize that there's no need to fight against loving you. I have for so long."

"It doesn't matter, does it? There aren't any words. Just being here with you—I feel—"

"How do you feel?"
 "Safe and peaceful."
 "Peaceful?"

The honey-colored dusk paled, deepened to the mauve of twilight. Darkness fell. One by one the stars pricked a brightened pattern across the sky. Gay stirred in John's arms.

"What?" he asked.
 "We should go back, I suppose. Kate has probably gotten supper."

"Supper?"
 She laughed. "I'm not hungry either." Her face, as he watched, became grave. "We'll have to tell Kate."

"I don't think Kate needs to be told."

"She has something on her mind, certainly. She's been cross all day."

"Kate doesn't like me."
 "Oh, no, John. It isn't that. She's thinking of the fuss there'll be at home."

"Aren't you?"
 "I haven't been."

"I am. Do you want me to go with you? I should be in Portland day after tomorrow. But if it would help—"

"It wouldn't. You aren't used to cataclysms, I am." She sighed, then smiled and pressed closer to him.

"Don't think of it now. Let's keep this time for ourselves. It's going to be all right. Don't think. Just love me."

"Gay—" he said barely audibly.
 "Yes—?"
 "I wanted to hear your voice. I felt as though you had gone."

"I'm here."
 "Don't leave me." He dropped his hand gently upon her head.

"I can't leave you." She caught his hand, pressed it against her cheek. "I'm part of you."

Darkness lay over the landing. He stepped out and fastened the tie-rope. Bending, he took her hands to pull her up to the planking beside him. His arms went around her, held her there close against his breast.

"I can't let you go."
 "Let's stay here."
 "Oh, Gay, if we could—!"

"It's going to be all right. Nothing can spoil it, except ourselves. We must be very careful."
 "You're so lovely. I can't think when I'm with you like this. What you say—that's not very flattering. I meant, I just hear your voice. I've loved you so long, so hopelessly."

"Not hopelessly now."
 "I can't believe it."
 "We'll go in and tell Kate." Her voice was gay and confident. "That will help you to believe."

"I'm afraid of Kate. I'm afraid to go in."
 "Silly. I'll hold your hand tightly. Like this."

They walked, hands joined; up the path from the landing to the cabin. As he opened the porch door for her, she halted.

"Someone is here!" She dropped his hand.

The windows were raised. Through the screening came a murmur of voices inside the cabin. Gay took a few steps away from him, glanced in, then turned. In the light flooding through the window he saw that her face was grave and startled.

"Who—?" The question caught in his throat. He took a step.

"Todd is here," she said and was silent.

He caught her arm, drew her close to him.

"Gay," he asked, "you're all mine."

Her face relaxed. She smiled up at him.

"All yours," she said.

Social and Personal

Mrs. Harvey Allen and daughter Barbara spent Sunday with relatives in Brampton.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Anthony and Mrs. Hugh Cunningham, of Norval, visited with friends in Woodstock last week.

Misses Reta Gaetz and Ornella Herd, of Teeswater, and Miss Martha Laley, nurses-in-training at St. Joseph's Hospital, Guelph, spent Saturday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Laley.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Bartlett, of Ripley, called on friends in town yesterday afternoon. Mr. Bartlett was transferred to Ripley from the Georgetown branch of the Bank of Montreal last spring.

Gal. John Hoare has returned to Fort Sandwich, Halifax, where he is stationed, after spending a two-week furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoare, and with his brother, Edward, and Mrs. Hoare, in Oshawa.

Here are some of the many young Georgetowners whose donations have helped swell the total of the Herald War Victims' Fund past the $2200 mark in less than ten months.

THE WORK OF CHILDREN ALL OVER THE PROVINCE HAS BEEN NOTICED WORTHY IN HELPING IN SUCH CAUSES, AND THEY DESERVE THEIR SHARE OF PRAISE FOR HELPING THOSE LESS FORTUNATE THAN THEMSELVES.
