

CHAPTER X

So Christmas Eve came, and the costume ball at the Townes'. There were, as Baldy had told Jane, just ets of them at dinner. Cousin Annasal was still in bed, and it was Adeleide Laramore who made the sixth.

the was all in silvery green.

Edith had told Mrs. Follette frankly that she wished Adelaide had not been asked.

"But she fished for it. She always does. She flatters Uncle Fred and he falls for it."

Baldy brought Evans and Mrs Follette over in his flivver. They found Mrs. Laramore and Frederick already in the drawing room. Edith had not come down.

"She is always late," Frederick complained, "and she never apologizes." Baldy, silken and siim, in his page's scarlet, stood in the hall and ested." watched Edith descend the stairs She seemed to emerge from the shadows of the upper balcony like a shaft of light. She was all in silwary green, her close-clinging robegirdled with pearls, her hair banded with mistletoe. ber, then: "You shouldn't have to her. worn it," he said.

"The mistletoe? Why not?"

"You will tempt all men to kiss

"Men must resist temptation." His tone was light, but her heart missed a beat. There was something about this boy so utterly engaging. He had set her on a pedestal, and he worshiped her. When she said that she was not worth worshiping, he told her, "You don't mow-"

She was unusually silent during dinner. With Evans on one side of her and Baldy on the other she had little need to exert herself. Baldy was always adequate to any conversational tax, and Evans, in spite of his monk's habit, was not austere. He was, rather, like some attraclive young friar drawn back for the moment to the world. He showed himself a genial teller of tales-and capped each of Frederick's with one of his own. His mother was proud of him. She felt that life was taking on new aspects -this friendship with the Townesher son's increasing strength and social ease—the lace gown which she wore and which had been bought with a Dickens' pamphlet. What more could she ask? She was serene and satisfied. Adelaide, on the other side of Frederick Towne, was not serene and satisfied. She was looking par. plicities in these opulent days. ticularly lovely with a star of diamonds in her hair and sheer draper. when Eloise Harper charged up to ies of rose and faintest green. "I am him, dressed somewhat scantlly as anything you wish to call me," she a dryad, and handed him a foolish had said to Frederick when she monkey on a stick, she seemed to came in-"an 'Evening Star' or 'In suggest a heathen saturnalia rather the Gloaming' or 'Afterglow.' Per- than anything Christian and civihaps 'A Rose of Yesterday'-" she lized.

had put it rather pensively. of yesterdays," he had said, but know you are a whited sepulchre." his glance had held not the slightest hint of gallantry. She felt that she had, perhaps, been unwise to your prayers."

remind him of her age. when, towards the end of dinner, What reason had she to think that he rose and proposed a toast. "To any of this meant more to him than don't believe I know her," she said don't say no." little Jane Barnes, A Merry Christ- it did to her? Had he borne witness to the maid.

second's silence. Atvens drank as why? I he partook of a facrament.

.....

it, when things are so hard for herein Chicago." There was no response, so she turned to Frederick. "Couldn't Miss Barnes leave her sister for a few days?"

"No," he told her, "she couldn't." She persisted, "I am sure you didn't want her to miss the ball." "I did my best to get her here. Talked to her at long distance, but she couldn't see it."

"You are so good-hearted, Ricky." want her here myself."

She sat motionless, her eyes on her plate. When she spoke again it was of other things. "Did you hear that Delaseld is coming back?" "Who told you?"

"Eloise Harper. Benny's eister saw Del at Miami. She is sure he rades across the Great Dividet is expecting to marry the other

"Bad taste, I call it." "Everybody is crary to know who "Have they any idea?" "No. Benny's sister said he talked quite frankly about getting married. But he wouldn't say a word about the woman."

"I hardly think he will find Edith heart-broken." Towne glanced across the table. Edith was not wearing the willow. No shadow marred her lovely countenance. Her eyes were clear and shining pools of sweet content.

Her uncle was proud of that highheld head. He and Edith might not was proud of her. "No, she's not heart-broken," Adelaide's cool tone disturbed his reflections, "she is getting her heart mended."

"What do you mean?"

boy has lost his head." around with him; there's nothing se- to work any more. So will you rious in it."

"Don't be too sure. She's inter-"What makes you insist on that?"

irritably. cat seemed to purr, but she had | ried, Mr. Towne."

As she had entered the ballroom | place." men had crowded around her. 'Why," they demanded, "do you Dale? She's really very good." wear mistletoe, if you don't want to pay the forfeit?"

Backed up against one of the marble pillars, she held them off. "I do want to pay it, but not to any of

Her frankness diverted them 'Who is the lucky man?" "He is here. But he doesn't know he is lucky." They thought she was joking. But she was not. And on the other side of the marble pillar a page in scarlet listened, with joy and fear in his heart. "How fast we are going How fast."

There was dancing until midnight. then the curtains at the end of the room were drawn back, and the tree was revealed. It towered to the ceiling, a glittering, gorgeous thing. It was weighted with gifts for everybody, fantastic toys most of them, expensive, meaningless.

Evans, standing back of the crowd, was aware of the emptiness of it all. Oh, what had there been throughout the evening to make men think of the Babe who had been born at Bethlehem?

The gifts of the Wise Men? Perhaps. Gold and frankincense and myrrh? One must not judge too narrowly. It was hard to keep sim-

Yet he was heavy-hearted, and

"A monkey for a monk," said He had been gallant but unin- Eloise. "Mr. Follette, your cassock spired. "You are too young to talk is frightfully becoming. But you

> "Am I?" "Of course. I'll bet you never say

She danced away, unconscious She was still more disturbed, that her words had pierced him. to the faith that was within him? They all stood up. There was a And was it within him? And if not, Towne's office, and that it is im-

He stood there with his foolish Then Edith said, "It seems al- monkey on his stick, while around approached her, "I have resigned ty of " " most beartless to be kappy, doesn't him whirled a laughing, shricking from your uncle's office. Did he crows. will, the thing was a care | tell your val, not a sacred celebration. Was there no way in which he might bear | about business."

witness? old ballads, "Dame, get up and point. "I have something I must bake your pies," and "I saw three | talk over with you. I don't know ships a-sailing." Evans was in no whether I am doing the wise thing. mood for the dame who baked her But it is the only honest thing." pies on Christmas day in the morning, or the pretty girls who whistled and sang-on Christmas day in the morning.

tributed the lights in the room were turned out. The only illumination back and marry me." was the golden effulgence which encircled the tree.

In his monk's robe, within that circle of light, Evans seemed a mys- marry me?" tical figure. He seemed, too, approprintely ascetic, with his gray hair,

But his voice was fresh and clear. Adelaids interposed irrelevantly, And the song he sang hushed the "I should hate to spend Christmas great room into silence.

> O little town of Bethlehem. How still we see thee lie. Above thy deep and dreamless sleep.

The silent stars go by; Yet in thy dark streets shingth. The everlasting light, The hopes and fears of all the years Are met in thee tonight."

Frederick could be cruel at mo-! He sang as if he were alone in ments, and her persistence was irri- some vast arched space, beneath tating. "Oh, look here, Adelaide, it spires that reached towards Heaven, fault?" wasn't entirely on her account. I behind some grille that separated him from the world. sung not to that crowd of upturned faces, not to those men and women | then lifted her eyes to Edith's with in shining silks and satins, not to Jane who was far away, but to those others who pressed close-his com-

So he had sung to them in the his money?" hospital, sitting up in his narrow bed-and most of the men who had demanded. listened were-gone.

audience seemed to wake with a monk had vanished! Evans left word with Baldy that he would go home on the trolley. "I am not quite up to the supper and all that. Will you look after Moth-

"Of course. Say, Evans, that song was top notch. Edith wants you to sing another." "Will you tell her I can't? I'm always hit it off. But, by Jove, he sorry. But the last time I sang that was for the fellows-in France. And it-got me-" "It got me, too," Baldy confided:

"made all this seem-silly."

It was just before New Year's "They are an attractive pair, lit. that Lucy Logan brought a letter tle Jane and her brother. And the | for Frederick Towne to sign, and when he had finished she said, "Mr. "Over Edith? Oh, well, she plays Towne, I'm sorry, but I'm not going please accept my resignation?" He showed his surprise. "What's the matter? Aren't we good enough for you?" "It isn't that." She stopped and "I know the signs, dear man," the went on, "I'm going to be mar-

"Married?" He was at once con-And it was Adelaide who was gratulatory. "That's a pleasant right. Edith had come to the knowl- thing for you, and I mustn't spoil it For a moment he stood admiring edge that night of what Baldy meant by telling you how hard it is going to be to find someone to take your

> "I think if you will have Miss Frederick was curious. What kind of lover had won this quiet Lucy? Probably some clerk or salesman.

"What about the man? Nice fellow,

I hope—" "Very nice, Mr. Towne," she flushed, and her manner seemed to forbid further questioning. She went away, and he gave orders to the cashier to see that she had an increase in the amount of her final check. "She will need some pretty things. And when we learn the date we can give her a present." So on Saturday night Lucy left and on the following Monday a card was brought up to Edith Towne

"And—I told him he must not, Miss Towns."

She read it. "Lucy Logan? "She says she is from Mr.

portant." "Miss Towne," Lucy said as Edith two, Mr. Waldron. In her room.

to the walle on a should be to be a should be "No. Uncle Fred rarely speaks

With characteristic straightfor-Edith had asked him to sing the | wardness Lucy came at once to the "I can't imagine what you can have to say." "No you can't. It's this-" she hesitated, then spoke with an ef-When all the gifts had been dis- fort. "I am the girl Mr. Simms is in love with. He wants to come > Edith's fingers caught at the arm of the chair. "Do you mean that it was because of you—that he didn't

"Yes. He used to come to the office when he was in Washington and the weary lines of his old-young dictate letters. And we got in the way of talking to each other. He seemed to enjoy it, and he wasn't like some men-who are just-silly.

And I began to think about him a lot. But I didn't let him see it. Andhe told me afterward, he was always thinking of me. And the morning of your wedding day he came down to the office-to say 'Good-by.' He said he-just had to. And-well, he let it out that he loved me, and didn't want to marry you. But he said he would have to go on with it. And-and I told him he must not. Miss Towne."

Edith stared at her. "Do you mean that what he did was your

"Yes." Lucy's face was white, "if you want to put it that way. I told And now it seemed to him that he him he hadn't any right to marry you if he loved me." She hesitated. a glance of appeal. "Miss Towne, I wonder if you are big enough to believe that it was just because I cared so much-and not because of

"You think you love him?" she

"I know I do. And you don't. You As the last words rang out his never have. And he didn't love you. Why-if he should lose every cent tomorrow, and I had to tramp the Then the lights went up. But the | road with him, I'd do it gladly. And you wouldn't. You wouldn't want him unless he could give you everything you have now, would you? Would you, Miss Towne?" Edith's sense of justice dictated her answer. "No," she found herself unexpectedly admitting. "If I had to tramp the roads with him. I'd be bored to death."

"I think he knew that, Miss Towne. He told me that if he didn't marry you, your heart wouldn't be broken. That it would just hurt your pride."

Edith had a moment of hysterical mirth. How they had talked her over. Her lover-and her uncle's stenographer! What a tragedy it had been! And what a comedy! She leaned forward a little, locking her fingers about her knees. "I wish you'd tell me all about it." So Lucy told the simple story. And in telling it showed herself so naive, so steadfast, that Edith was aware of an increasing respect for the woman who had taken her place in the heart of her lover. She perceived that Lucy had come to this interview in no spirit of triumph. She had dreaded it, but had felt it easier for you if you knew it be-fore other people did." Edith's forehead was knitted in a slight frown. "The whole thing has been most unpleasant," she said. When are you going to marry her duty. "I thought it would be

"I told him on St. Valentine's day. It seemed-romantic." Romance and Dell Edith had a sudden illumination. Why, this was what he had wanted, and she had given him none of it! She had laughed at him-been his good comrade. Little Lucy adored him-and had set St. Valentine's day for the weddingt There was nothing small about Edith Towne. She knew fineness when she saw it, and she had a feeling of humility in the presence of little Lucy "I think it was my fault as much as Del's," she stated. "I should never have said 'Yes." People haven't any right to marry who feel as we did."

"Oh," Lucy said rapturously, "how dear of you to say that. Miss Towne, I always knew you were big. But I didn't dream you were so beautiful." Tears wet her checks. "You're just - marvellous," she said, wiping them away.

"No, I'm not." Edith's eyes were on the fire. "Normally, I am rather proud and-hateful. If you had come a week ago-" Her voice fell away into silence as she still stared at the fire.

Lucy looked at her curiously. "A week ago?"

Edith nodded. "Do you like fairy tales? Well, once there was a princess. And a page came and sangunder her window." The fire purred and crackled. "And the princess liked the song-"

"Oh," said Lucy, under her breath. She stood up. "I can't tell you how thankful I am that I came." "You're not going to run away yet," Edith told her. "I want you to have lunch with me. Upstairs. You must tell me all your plans."

"Why not? I want you. Please turbed parlor mald speaking through the tube to the pantry. "Miss Towns wants luncheon for Something nice, she says, and plen-

"I haven't many. And I really oughtn't to stay."

. Gallant Sea Micer Honored

which the following instruction was engraved:

"I'meested by the Government of Canada to Percy Ambross Kally, high qualities of those who so down Chief Officer, R.M.S. Lady Hawking, to the sea in ships." for meritorious conduct when the treat was sunk without warning by en enemy submarine on the alife of February 19, 1942."

The presentation took place in the Roya Soutian hotel at Halifax, Captain Kelly receiving the government's staying to assist in the lowering token at the hands of C. H. Hoster- other boats after his own was malely man, Marine Agent for the Depart- away. His Judgment in all things was ment of Transport at Halifar, repre- above discussion. His leadership and erating Hon. C. D. Hone, Acting friendly discipline were first-class. Transpart Minister.

In the photograph Captain Kelly person in the lifeboat ever criticised is seen holding the adver tray, and on him. All considered him deserving of his immediate left is Mr. Hosterman. | bonor."

CAPTAIN PERCY AMBROSE On Mr. Kelly's right to Captala Chilly, Chief Officer of the Charles Waterboars, Separintendent Canadian National Steamship "Lady of Pilota, Halifas. In the centre back-Hawkins" when that vessel was mak ground in W. G. Miller, Halifest by an enemy submarias on the oven- manager, Canadian Hational Steamleg of I chruary 19, 1943, was recently thing, who represented R. B. Teakle, boroted by the Dominion Govern-General Manager. Standing in the ment for conspicuous gallantry shows foreground next to Mr. Hosterman in on that occasion. The testimental Arthur Reading Director of Man-marries of constrainties from Mr. Tealds said: "Mr. Kelly throughout the trying period duplayed the Castala Kelly was in charge of a Meboat containing 76 persons which was affined four days before being sighted by a rescue ship. The official account of the event cites that "Captain Kelly showed gallastry is His scamanship was good. Not one

Georgetown Fall Fair September 11 & 12

44 tell my family that as long as Jack is oversees, we'll out hash and like it."

"WE ARE at war. It costs lots to win. It would cost everything to lose. So I don't figure that because we'll soon pay a small amount as compulsory savings, I can fold my hands and say 'That's that!' No sir! Some people may need compulsory savings to save something for their own good. But that's the minimum. I'm out to save all I can to buy War Savings Stamps and Certificates to help win the war and have something substantial put by for the days when there won't be all this work and overtime."

"I've christened my garbage can 'Hitler' and believe me he doesn't get anything that's worth anything."

Buy War Savings Stamps from druggists, banks, post offices, telephone offices, department stores, grocers, tobacconists and other retail stores. Certificates may be purchased for immediate delivery in denominations of $5, $10, $25 from banks, trust companies and post offices.

National War Finance Committee.