Why not slip a subscription to the Herald into that overseas box you're packing? It'll multiply his pleasure in your Christmas gift $1 times.

Verdun Rebekah Lodge will hold a euchre in the Georgetown Arena, Tuesday, November 17th, at 8:30 sharp. Good Prizes and Door Prizes. Admission 25c.

The regular meeting of Normal Junior Farmers and Junior Institute will be held in November 10th, at the home of Hill and Elizabeth Field 3rd line, Chinguarousey.

Halloween night brought forth its usual crop of costumed "spooks." Apparently the fun was all harmless, too, as we've heard no angry voices raised in protest over damaged property.

Normal Junior Institute and Junior Farmers will hold their Annual Church Service in Normal Presbyterian Church on Sunday, November 15th, at 8:15 pm. Rev. A. M. Miller of Brampton will be the guest speaker.

The Municipality as a whole has done wonderfully well toward the Third Victory Loan. The Council last night purchased $25,000 in bonds the Hydro Commission has bought $5,000 worth and the Cemetery Board $500.

Mrs. K. Preston received three pairs of warm wool mitts for her overseas parcel, last week, from Miss J. Farmer, all the way from Williamsburg. Miss Farmer is a sister of Mrs. M. Smythe, Georgetown. She had read about Mrs. Preston's good work in the columns of the Herald, and thought it well deserving of a donation.

A number of excellent records on Performance Tests completed by Halton County breeders are reported in the current issue of the Halton Monthly Test Bulletin. Harold Bingham, Georgetown, took fourth place in a class of 49 mature cows, that completed yearly records of twice-a-day milking, with Meadowdale Sylvia Kelly, who gave 20,075 lbs. milk containing 668 lbs. fat. In the two-year-old class of the 305 day division, Tessa Jane, from the herd of W. M. Thompson, Hornby, was fifth in a class of 49, with her twice-a-day milking production of 410 lbs. fat from 11,851 lbs. milk. Very creditable records were also reported from the herds of the following breeders: Morley Watson, Tunley; J. C. Bell and Fred W. Hamilton and Sons, Freeman; R. C. Owen, Georgetown; Methuen Dearing, Palermo; and John Pickett, Hornby.

Lynn River Tansen Olive, a pure-bred Holstein, owned by Emerson Ford, Hornby, has qualified for a Certificate of Longtime Production with a lifetime total on record of performance test of 100,275 lbs. milk containing 3,588 lbs. fat. Started on test as a three-year-old, she has been milked twice daily in all but the first of her seven lactations when she was three times daily. She has qualified for the 305 day division four times, her best record being in that division, when as a seven-year-old she gave 18,215 lbs. milk containing 639 lbs. fat. It is interesting to note that her sire is a grandson of the Canadian Champion for fat production over all ages and breeds, DeKal Plus Seals Dixie, with 1,784 lbs. fat from 33,529 lbs. milk in 365 days.

William Dickenson Died October 25th

The death of William Dickenson occurred on October 25th, in the Toronto General Hospital, quite suddenly, although he had been in ill health for some years.
Born in Leeds, England, he came out to Canada in 1911 and has lived in the Stouartville district for some years.
Surviving are his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Christina, at home; three sons, John, at home, Henry and Thomas, overseas with the Canadian Armed Forces; Harry is believed a prisoner of war in Germany. Mr. Dickenson was in his 58th year at time of death.

"Honeymoon Mountains"

A huge noisy whirling plane, and she had lived always in the quiet and peace of the mountains. Still, it was only a matter of a trip to San Francisco; because, once there, she could go directly to the hotel Grandmother knew about, the hotel at which they had stayed years ago; and from the hotel where Stuart would meet her. Grandmother was a dream, and a gentleman, and as soon as she met him her troubles would be over, for he would tell her everything she needed to know.

This was what Grandmother said and outwardly Deborah assented; but to her he was really a man and a stranger, and in her heart was a deadly terror of marriage and whatever it might mean, of meeting this strange man and being with him, being alone with him.

There was nothing to be done. She had to go. She had to be married. They were in such trouble about money, she and Gary, that there was scarcely enough to buy her ticket to San Francisco, and when it came to her costume for the journey the problem was dreadful. Grandmother had forgotten about clothes for years. She was horrified when they came to contemplate Deborah's wardrobe. She wanted to write immediately to Houston and have a large selection of articles sent out, but Deborah convinced her that there was no time, and that they would have to manage with what was in the house. So they made a traveling costume from one of Grandmother's. It was quiet and reserved, although perhaps the lines were not such as a professional dressmaker would have put into it. It would serve.

The dress was made of brown cloth, very neat and plain. A hat was rather a problem, but they evolved eventually a neat small black turban with a modest cluster of white pansies on one side. Grandmother said the hat was perhaps a little old-fashioned, but she said that Deborah was far too pretty to travel alone dressed too attractively. She cried when she said it, and warned Deborah again of the danger of speaking to strangers.

Grandmother sent only one other dress with Deborah; her own wedding dress. When they tried it on, it fitted perfectly. Deborah looked at herself in the glass, and then quickly back at Grandmother, with dark startled eyes.

"It's . . . it's . . ." she touched the neck.
"It is for your husband, my darling," Grandmother said gently, and Deborah's blood was cold again in her veins.

Canadian Editors Visit Canadian Army

Visiting editors at a tank brigade demonstration rode about in these "tank buggies" and marvelled at the way they could negotiate any kind of rough terrain. These men were part of a party of Canadian editors who recently visited Great Britain at the invitation of the Canadian Government.

FISHING IN THE NATIONAL PARK

How are they biting? is one of the first questions asked by many visitors as they enter the gates of Canada's national parks. And they are not referring to mosquitoes. A holiday in the national parks would not be complete for these visitors unless they had an opportunity to match their wits against the wiles of the game fish for which the parks are famous.

As a prominent feature of most of Canada's national parks is the many lakes and streams contained within their boundaries, it is only to be expected that fishing is a major attraction. In Banff National Park alone there are 150 larger lakes and at least 20 streams well worth fishing. Here a fish hatchery is maintained where more than 2,000,000 young fish of half a dozen game species are reared annually for stocking the park waters.

Stocking many of the lakes and streams scattered over the vast area covered by the mountain parks is no easy matter. The fry are loaded in cans and taken by the hatchery truck as far as roads will permit. There they
