.. With the Army ..

A pair of shorts, 28 sergeants of the Canadian Women's Army Corps and an invitation to lunch were items which recently added up to a "life-most-embarrassing-moment" for a bewildered Canadian Army Sergeant.

Stationed in Calgary, the Sergeant made a duty trip to the Vermilion, B.C. Training Centre of the CWAC, where 500 girls are in training. The Centre is operated entirely by women, the only men being a couple of Engineers who look after heating and other similar tasks.

It was a warm day for travelling, so the Sergeant was wearing shorts. On the lunch-table, and the Sergeant was invited to lunch in the CWAC Sergeant's Mess, which, unknown to him, was governed by a rule forbidding the wearing of shorts. When all diners were seated a feminine Sergeant-Major, eye a-stare, informed the fortunately oblivious visitor of the taboo, amidst gales of laughter and offers of the loan of a skirt.

The Sergeant with a newly revised opinion of women in the Army, is still blushing for the story that him back to Calgary and his meretricious fellow sergeants.

Harvest leave, not to exceed six weeks' duration, may be granted to fully-trained soldiers of the Canadian Army where service conditions permit. The leave will be taken without pay and allowances, when granted. Only soldiers who have experience in farm work are eligible.

Periods during which harvest leave may be granted will vary according to crop conditions in various parts of Canada, but all soldiers must report back to their units before October 31, 1943.

Those who may not obtain Harvest Leave are soldiers awaiting despatch overseas, and those awaiting allocation for completing Army Courses. Members of the Veterans Guard also can be spared from their duties may apply.

Rejected applicants for enlistment in Canadian Active Army will be interviewed at reception centres by representatives of National Selective Service according to National Defence Headquarters' announcement. They will be assigned to essential occupations where possible.

The Selective Service Officers will operate in various reception centres in accordance with arrangements to be made locally by District Officers Commanding Military Districts throughout Canada.

Key men of Civilian Defence ARP groups will not be enlisted in the Reserve Army without prior consent of civil defence authorities. Those affected are leaders of Auxiliary Fire Services, Chief Wardens, Heads of Warden posts, men in charge of First Aid and Road Engineers.

This measure is designed to eliminate competition between Reserve Army or Pacific Coast Militia Rangers and the Civil defence organization, both of which services are regarded as being of equal importance to Canada's defence.

TERRA COTTA

Dear Editor:
As your humble Correspondent, representing our Hamlet for a number of years, I couldn't let one item in last week's issue of the Herald go by without comment. I refer to the celebration of the 77th Anniversary of The Herald. It certainly is a credit to Georgetown to have a lively news paper to chronicle the local happenings and those of the surrounding neighborhood. I am pleased to be able to say that I, your correspondent, have been a life time reader of the Herald. The changes which have taken place around Georgetown during all those past years are all too wonderful to relate. I might add that I am always too pleased to offer some items of interest from this hamlet, believing as I do, that it is one way to help a good newsy paper. Although I am getting on in years, I hope to be spared a few years yet, and will continue to pen a few of our local happenings. Here's wishing you continued success.

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) R. J. Striener

It is with deep regret that we learned of the sudden passing of the late J. M. Mackie, who lost his life recently at Cobourg. The deceased it appears was driving a transport truck for Loblaw's of Brampton when the ill fated truck skidded or turned over into the ditch and he was instantly killed. It was sad to know that deceased was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Mackie of this village. He leaves his wife and three little children to mourn his loss. We certainly join in extending our deepest sympathy to the bereaved parents, widow and friends in the sad loss of a loving son and husband.

Miss Annie Puckering of Toronto is spending a few days with Terra Cotta friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison and family of Toronto, are spending the summer at their summer cottage here. We are pleased to welcome them back to our midst.
