The New Hat

By SELMA HART
(McClure Syndicate—WFO Service.)

BILL KEMP, the head of the exchange department, looked up wearily from his desk. It had been a day of odd jobs—refunds, complaints, exchanges. Everything had been relatively unimportant and yet everything demanded instant attention. Had Bill Kemp been ten years older than he was he would not have taken it so seriously, and consequently would have been nearly as fresh at the end of the day as he was early in the morning.

"I want," said a pair of violet eyes, at least Bill Kemp would have sworn that it was the eyes that spoke, so timidly and questionably did they regard him. "I want to know if I could do something about my lace hat."

Bill Kemp sighed. They were such marvelous eyes. And then to be mundanely interested in a hat—a silly lace hat.

"Well," he said gruffly, "what did you contemplate doing about this lace hat? If it's been worn it cannot possibly be accepted for exchange or refund."

The latter words issued mechanically from his mouth, and he wondered subconsciously how many hundreds of times he had uttered that same sentence—sometimes about gloves, sometimes about shoes.

"Oh, it hasn't been worn!" came the soft voice again. The voice sounded as though it were full of tears and he looked at the violet eyes again. Sure enough, there were large tears there.

Bill Kemp steeled himself. All women used tears as a means to an end and he determined that he would not be taken in. "Well, go on, go on," he said as testily as he could.

"You see I decided last Saturday that I could take it—it's a beautiful hat. Oh, it was really the most beautiful hat in the whole world, I think," she said wistfully. "I looked and looked at it—before, you know—and on Saturday I paid a deposit on it, a deposit of a dollar. I was to take it this Saturday, but—the lips that were soft and pink closed firmly. "I—I believe that I shan't need it after all."

"And so you want the dollar back again I take it?" he said, tapping his pencil against the desk and regarding it coolly.

"Oh, my, no," she said softly. Of course they wouldn't give back the dollar, but I went to the millinery department and the clerk said that I had agreed to take it and I would have to finish paying for it. I—I have the money, but—"

"Will you sit down?" said Bill Kemp, rising suddenly, wondering why it was that he had not thought of it before. "I haven't been head of the department long and I am at a loss to understand one thing. Why do women buy a thing, take it home and then run right back here to return it?"

The violet eyes crinkled at the corners and the soft pink lips twitched. "I don't know," she confessed. "I never do myself. It's not that I probably wouldn't if I had the chance, but I work and so scarcely have time to buy what I need let alone buying things for the fun of thinking I really owned them for a while before I returned them. It must be lots of fun, mustn't it?"

"And so you want to leave this flower hat on our hands," he expostulated.

"Oh, no, not flower!" she exclaimed in horrified tones; "it's lace. And besides, I don't want to leave it on your hands. I'd love to keep it myself only I heard about this Mrs. Benzinger whose husband is in the hospital and whose children are all so small that she can't work. It wouldn't be right to wear a lovely hat when they might be hungry. If you say I don't have to take it I'm going to take a basket out there tonight." She looked at her watch. "It's way, way out in—"

"You run along and get the basket and I'll see about the dollar refund. Then when you get the basket filled come back here and get the dollar and I'll take the basket out for you—wherever it is. You can't be running all over town—a girl like you—"

He listened to her words of thanks with an air of abstraction. "We ought to get a bit of supper at a restaurant, first, maybe," he said nonchalantly, quite as though he were in the habit of asking strange girls to eat with him. He sent the call boy for the dollar and pulling a card from his pocket, wrote down: "She'd like a hat—lace—later."

And the violet-eyed Mrs. Bill Kemp with her still-shiny wedding ring was happily surprised on her birthday a few months later with a round hatbox with a huge violet bow. The hatbox held a hat of lace.

Diamonds, Platinum in Steel
Diamonds and platinum, used in steel manufacture, run into thousands of karats and grams a year. Most diamonds look like dark grey, sharp-edged pebbles, cost $100 a karat, come from Brazil, are known as "carbons." Another type of diamond used is "boris," imperfect white diamonds, cost $30 a karat. Diamonds are for rock drilling in iron-ore mines, for truing grinding wheels, for making dies for drawing wire. Platinum, fine jewelry grade, has at least 10 different uses in steel laboratories.

HALTON FARMERS IN URGENT NEED OF HELP

up in each of the five urban centres of the County. The keyman for Georgetown is Clarence Wilson and his telephone number is Day Phone 196. We join with the local Committee in urging everyone who can possibly spare the odd day, half day, or a few hours after supper to phone 196 and register when he will be available. We realize that most local residents are already carrying a much heavier load than normal, but nevertheless the most of the men folk can give a few hours occasionally to help out in a critical situation, which is so closely allied with our war effort.

An eminent German authority stated, following the war of 1914-18, that they lost that conflict because they were unable to feed their mounting livestock population and at the same time maintain their people. Let us make sure we do not find ourselves in a similar position this time. We have every prospect for excellent crops this year—they must be saved—and in this, our urban and rural people have an equal responsibility. Every urban dweller can play some part in the task at hand—if you are not physically able to picket hay, you can perhaps drive the horses for the hay loader, the hay fork, the hay rake, handle a hoe, or stook grain, for a few hours and thus relieve the farm operator for heavier jobs. Last year, we understand from Mr. Whitlock, he secured the equivalent of 518 days' work from Toronto Commandos. These men came from offices, factories, stores, etc., and for the most part helped in haying. With few exceptions they did an excellent job and the 56 farmers who received this help were loud in their praise of the service rendered. Surely we in Georgetown are not going to leave it all to the Toronto Commandos. The painting job on the house, the cutting of the lawn, the hoeing of our Victory Garden, can be left for a more opportune time. So let's go local Commandos, back up the boys on the beaches of France by phoning NOW to 196 and volunteering our services for Farm Commando work in the district. The local bowling green and the golf course can, no doubt, get along without our efforts for the time being.

NORVAL JUNIOR INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Norval Junior Institute and Junior Farmers was held on June 13 at the home of George Henderson.

The theme of the Junior Institute meeting was "Home Beautification" and the roll call was answered by interesting facts about flower culture. An interesting paper entitled "My Flower Garden" was read by Ismay Kean. Marion Hunter told many useful and interesting facts about the care of flowers and demonstrated various ways of arranging bouquets.

At the meeting of the Junior Farmers, the roll call was answered by methods in handling hay. Craig Reid and Claude Pickett spoke further on the same topic.

At the joint meeting, Mr. Ralph Ross, a former principal of Georgetown High School, was the speaker. John McNabb moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Pickett, and Mr. Ross to Mrs. Henderson and George for their kindness in opening their home for the evening.

At the close of the meeting delicious refreshments were served by the social committee. Ismay Kean and Ward Brownridge.

A committee composed of Doris Switzer, Marion Currie, Jack Roddell and John McNabb were appointed to make arrangements for a dance to be held at Huttonville early in July.

124TH ANNIVERSARY SERVICES HELD AT BOSTON CHURCH

On Sunday last, June 26th, Boston Presbyterian Church celebrated its 124th anniversary. Situated in the "Scotch Block", a few miles South of Georgetown, this old church is one of Esquimaux township's historical buildings. The guest speaker on Sunday was the Rev. Douglas, of Toronto, and a choir supplied special music for the occasion.

The first part of this building was erected in 1826 by Scottish residents who had settled in the district some years before. Although money was not at all plentiful, trustees were elected in 1826, and were responsible for collecting such sums as were necessary from all residents of the district.

The construction was not complete until 1835. Workmanship was of the best and pine used on the interior was without knots. The building, beautiful in appearance, consisted of many domes and a large gallery. Pews were divided into six divisions, four on the ground floor and two in the gallery. These pews were rented to members.

The first minister was Rev. Peter Ferguson, whose name is still familiar in the Scotch Block. Worshipers came from Acton, Limehouse, Glen Williams, Norval, Trafalgar and Nassagaweya, on foot, on horseback and in lumber wagons. Marriages were performed by Rev. Ferguson for payment of money or any type of farm produce.

In every month except one during 1943, RAF fighters, fighter-bombers and medium bombers carried out at least 3,000 daylight sorties on offensive operations.
