CLIFFORD COOK ROBBED

On Saturday afternoon, Mr. Clifford Cook, of the Town Line, hired a man to work on his farm until spring. However, he wasn't fated to have help long. Upon his return from his brother-in-law's wedding that same afternoon, he found the man gone, and with him Mr. Cook's new leather jacket, a pair of electric clipper plates, tobacco and papers.

Discovering the theft immediately, Mr. Cook notified police in Georgetown and Brampton, and after doing his chores, decided he'd set on the trail himself. He apprehended his man on Brampton Main Street South, in the act of thumbing a ride to Toronto, picked him up and "peeled" him off to find his leather jacket being worn beneath two or three other coats, and his other belongings also in the man's possession. All were, needless to say, recovered.
