Hat Protection Essential

The following article from a publication of the Workmen's Compensation Board is a timely warning to every person who may come near moving machinery.

The Chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board, Mr. William Morrison, B.A., K.C., made the statement late in 1944 that the Board had handled 40 cases of women workers who had suffered scalp injuries from entangled hair. The recent intensive consideration given to the protection of women workers is not, therefore, based on theory but on hard practical experience. Mr. Morrison mentioned the case of a woman who, as he said, "wouldn't wear a cap and now doesn't need one." The reason she doesn't need a cap now is that she has no hair to protect because the wig with which she has been provided doesn't offer a serious hazard.

This question of protection of hair calls for two forms of guarding: first, the guarding of machinery and shafting, and the guarding of the hair of the operator. It is not entirely a matter which is tied up only with women workers, because periodically there are cases of torn scalps suffered by male workers.

The general experience of industry in Ontario shows that there is a need for proper head protection, and plant management and workers alike should co-operate and prevent this horrible and painful type of injury.

Should an accident happen and fall within the scope of The Workmen's Compensation Act, the Board will pay the medical account and allow compensation for the period of convalescence, but may make no award for permanent injury unless the condition which is left is such as to interfere with earning capacity.

It is a long time since the days in Ontario when the Indian Tribes scalped their enemies, but scalping still goes on, not through deliberate intent, but through failure of people to see that proper protection is provided for, and used by, operators exposed to this hazard.

The question is one, therefore, which must be left in your hands for your serious consideration and action.

CANADIANS RETRAIN FOR PEACETIME JOBS

The machinery which trained Canadians for wartime jobs is to be put into reverse to train them for peace, according to a recent statement from the Department of Labour. During the war over 250,000 Canadian civilians were trained by the War Emergency Training Programme to take jobs in war work. For the armed services 120,000 men were given vocational training.

The objects of post-war vocational training will be (a) to train or re-train discharged members of the armed forces; (b) to re-train war workers for peacetime jobs; (c) to train young persons, including those of high school age. To assist in reaching these objectives, two orders-in-council were passed by the government last March. Because education is a responsibility of the provincial governments, these two orders were passed to facilitate help by the federal government to the provinces.

The first order provides for agreements with the provincial governments under which grants of up to two million dollars may be paid to the provinces each year for ten years. This is to assist in operating plans of vocational training at secondary or high school level. An additional sum of up to 10 million dollars will also be provided during the next three years to help the provinces meet the cost of the extra vocational school equipment necessary to carry on the training.

The second order authorizes agreements with the provinces to provide vocational training to persons referred by the Employment Service of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. This includes any man or woman over 16 years of age whose job prospects depend upon re-training. Provisions are made for the continuance of the trade training which was given to young persons under the Youth Training Scheme before the war.

The Department of Labour is of the opinion that these plans will be of considerable assistance in easing the transition from wartime to peacetime economy in this country. In properly equipping Canada's youth and industrial population to meet the varied demands for trained personnel. At the same time they help the provinces to keep up-to-date their vocational training facilities.

DEATH OF MRS. W. C. DONALDSON

A resident of Georgetown several years ago, where her husband was an employee of J. N. O'Neill, Mrs. Edith Donaldson died at her home in Brampton after an illness of several months. Born in England, she came to Canada 26 years ago and had resided in Southampton, Chippawa and Georgetown prior to moving to Brampton.

Surviving are her husband, Major W. Charles Donaldson, overseas, and one daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Owsen.

WILLIAM M. BIRKS of Montreal, National Chairman of the National Clothing Collection for Liberated Countries. The collection, sponsored by the Canadian United Allied Relief Fund on behalf of UNRRA, will be held from October 1st to the 20th, when it is planned to give Canadians an opportunity to bring comfort to the suffering millions in Europe by making this clothing collection their personal business. Canadians will be asked to give only such serviceable used clothes as they can spare without replacement. The garments will be distributed free to the people of the war-ravaged Allied countries under the direction of UNRRA experts. Committees will carry on the good work in every Canadian Community.

THURLBECK—PRICE WEDDING AT BRIDE'S HOME IN HORNBY

Pink and white gladioli decorated the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Price of Hornby, Wednesday afternoon, August 29th, where a quiet but pretty wedding took place, when their daughter, Margaret Norine, became the bride of John Alexander Thurlbeck, son of Mr. William Thurlbeck and the late Mrs. Thurlbeck of Montreal. Rev. Fred Ainsworth officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street length frock of pale blue sheer chiffon, over blue satin, with corsage of white roses and a string of pearls, with earrings to match, the gift of the bridegroom, a white feather skull cap with shoulder length veil. Her attendant, Miss Stella Hamilton, of Hamilton, wore beige lace over pink satin with a corsage of white roses, picture hat and accessories of beige. Mr. Greenville Arnott of Streetsville was groomsmen. Mr. Joseph Harris of Hamilton, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing sky blue sheer crepe with a corsage of white roses and white accessories. During the signing of the register, Mr. Harris played "Morning." After a dainty buffet supper was served on the lawn by cousins of the bride, the couple left for points north, the bride travelling in a figured crepe frock and a powder blue coat with white accessories.

WHEN THE BOYS COME BACK TO THE FARMS

They'll probably want telephone service, if they didn't have it before. War has taught a lot of those in uniform—and their parents, too—to rely on telephones more than ever.

Our plans are ready to make rural telephone service in Ontario and Quebec available to a greater number of users in the post-war period.

Much of the preliminary work already had been done when war interrupted the program extending rural telephone service. We intend to resume it as soon as the necessary materials and manpower are available.
