First Aid

DO YOU know how to give First Aid to a noisy Radio? I'll tell you — but first of all let me say that it all depends on what make of Radio you have. No two are exactly alike you know — each has its own little quirks and peculiarities: each calls for individual treatment. So let's assume an imaginary radio — say a "Blank — Model Z."

NOW WHEN a Blank — Model Z develops a case of "noisitis" it might be due to any one of 11 different causes. Let me just list them for you — (1) loose connections: (2) loose connections to oscillator series condenser: (3) loose elements in the tubes: (4) corroded rotor contact or tuning condenser: (5) "peeling" tuning condenser plates: (6) leaky detector plate by-pass condenser: (7) poorly soldered audio transformer leads: (8) dirty volume control contact: (9) dirty or poorly-adjusted switch contacts: (10) noisy plate circuit resistor: (11) external electrical apparatus in vicinity.

WELL NOW, of course you might try to fix up your radio yourself by examining carefully each of those 11 trouble sources with the proper type of equipment, and using the proper remedy. Or you might call in some electrical tinkerer who is handy with a screw-driver and a jack-knife, but short on radio knowledge.

BUT — IF you really value your radio and if you really want to get that noise eliminated — call on a trained technician, skilled in servicing all types of radios. Have him make a complete examination with the latest methods and scientific instruments, and let him make your radio as sweet and healthy as the day you bought it.
