CONTRIBUTIONS STILL ACCEPTABLE

As Recognition Day approaches, there is need for still more contributions to the fund for Georgetown's servicemen and women in order that the presentation cheques will be at least $25. The fund, which was undertaken almost a year ago now has not met with the response it merited. Were it not for large contributions from a relatively small group in the community, it would be even farther away from the $25 objective. There have been several factors which influenced the growth of the fund. Most of the industrial concerns in town have had presentations to their employees who were on active service and the firms and employees who contributed to their presentation have not felt themselves in a position to give as much to the recognition fund as they otherwise might. The fact that the fund was not started earlier has had an adverse effect — unfortunately the patriotic fervour which in wartime believes that "nothing is too good for our boys" dies a quick death in many hearts when peace comes. Third factor is one which would be present no matter what the gift — a disagreement with the form of gift, which in this case is money.

We have had no connection with the War Service Recognition Committee other than in our capacity as a reporter. We can say that at any meeting we have attended, we have been struck by the interest shown and time given in discussion by those members of the community who took it on their shoulders to arrange the presentation. We know that they feel they have gone the limit in asking for financial support. A canvass was made where no canvass should be necessary. Now we ask on their behalf that any who have not contributed (and there are many) and those whose contributions have not been commensurate with their ability to contribute (and there are many of these, too) get in touch with treasurer Ireland at the Bank of Commerce and boost the fund. It would be a glorious thing if the cheque could be not $25, but $30 or more.

This editorial is addressed primarily to the merchants who have not been asked to contribute to other recognition funds. It is your chance to show that you are proud of the service record of Georgetown and show this pride in a tangible way.

THE LIST

Perhaps it is unnecessary to say that the Herald editor or staff has no connection with the preliminary service list which appeared last week and in this issue of the Herald. The War Service Recognition Committee is anxious that no name be missing when the presentation is made on July 1st and this was the only means of making sure that it was correct. The Herald volunteered to be headquarters for receiving additions to the list and these have been turned over to the committee for a decision, and some additions have been made in this issue. They ask that any further names be turned in by June 15th, in order that final arrangements can be completed.

Those to be honoured are men and women whose homes were in Georgetown at time of enlistment. This decision was made by the committee as it was felt that any former resident living in another community would be honoured there, and any resident of the Township would come under one of the various recognition committees set up in rural areas.

HE REMEMBERS GEORGETOWN

His friends of all faiths join with the local Roman Catholic congregation in congratulating Rev. Fr. John Bolger on his elevation to the priesthood. Fr. Bolger has been a resident of Toronto since leaving her about twelve years ago, but with his family he has pleasant memories of his boyhood and he came back last Sunday to officiate in Holy Cross Church at the celebration of his second solemn high mass. Several friends from other congregations attended this impressive service which was afterwards followed by a dinner in the church basement.

It was a double celebration because the present pastor, Rev. Fr. V. J. Morgan is this week celebrating his silver anniversary in the priesthood, the past six years of which have been spent in the Georgetown—Acton parish. To both the Herald extends felicitations on the occasion.

THE TOPS IN GARDEN PARTIES

You might expect us to be biased in favour of the Lions Garden Party, but it is not just because we are connected with that club that we recommend it as the best that has yet visited the district. Anyone who has seen Mildred Morey in her starring role in the Army Show will know that she is tops in her profession and with the able backing of Al Harvey, Johnny Perkins and other members of the troupe, you are in for a treat. After some club debating, it was decided to again end the show this year with the fireworks display which brought so many out to the show last year. Don't miss it!

Preliminary List of Georgetown Service Personnel

This week the Georgetown War Service Recognition Committee has asked us to reprint the preliminary list of men and women who will be honoured on July 1st by presentation of cheques from the people of Georgetown. It was originally intended to make additions to the list for this issue, but as additional names are still coming in, the committee decided to delay their meeting until all the names were submitted. June 15th has been set as the deadline for submitting any additional names for the list and if there is a missing name that you have not already turned in, please do so immediately at the Herald Office. The names as they are received are turned over to the committee.

The final list will be printed in the Herald next week.
