HONORED by A.I.C. — J. S. McGowan, director of colonization and agriculture, Canadian National Railways, who has been elected a Fellow of the Agricultural Institute of Canada at the recent annual meeting of that organization at Lethbridge, Alta. The honor was given to Mr. McGowan "in recognition of his outstanding contribution in the fields of agricultural development and home building in the rural areas."

Fred W. Smith, Ventura, California, is the new president of the International Association of Lions Clubs. He was advanced by unanimous vote from the first vice-presidency at the 30th annual convention of the Association, in San Francisco. Smith succeeds Clifford D. Pierce, of Memphis, Tennessee.

The convention concluded the most successful year in the history of Lions International, according to the report made by the Secretary General and founder, Melvin Jones, of Chicago, Illinois. He reported the formation of 853 new Lions clubs and the addition of 47,332 men to the roster of the Association in the twelve-month period ending June 30, 1947, for a total of 4,717 clubs and 308,428 members. He stated that a Lions Club was established in mid-July at Lismore, New South Wales, Australia, and that there are Lions clubs in 19 countries. Lions International, he added, is now the largest, strongest and most effective service club in the world.

SHORT STORY

Dream of Youth

By JOHN ROWLEY

THEY were sitting on a bench in the park, the man and the woman, and the sun, shining through the pattern of leaves and branches above them, formed a network of light and shadows almost like some gossamer fairy lace.

The woman was about thirty-three or four, blonde with dimples, and a wide, good humored mouth. The man, who was about the same age, dark with good features and graying hair, leaned towards her.

"Do you remember, Jean, the first time we kissed?" he asked tenderly.

The girl laughed a little and there was a faint haze back of her eyes. "How could I forget," she said. "We were so young... and shy! I didn't know what I would say if you asked me... and I was in pins and needles for fear you wouldn't. They were good days, George. Happy days."

George reached over and patted her hand. "They were," he said. "They were wonderful days and I was so much in love with you. It spoiled my appetite! To me you were the most beautiful thing ever come down to earth." He laughed, his voice deep and resonant. "And you're still pretty nice!"

They were silent for a moment, each thinking the thoughts that these memories brought up. Finally the man laughed again. "Do you remember our last high school dance?"

The man, lost in thought, gazed out over the green expanse of the park. Far off he could see tall buildings rising out of a sea of billowy green, but he wasn't seeing any of that. Instead he was seeing a tall, old fashioned building in a small town a long way from the city.

"Well, goodbye, Jean," he said.

There was a blare of music coming from the building... dance music, a number popular at the time. He saw couples getting out of cars and some arriving on foot. Inside, the huge door of what was the gymnasium swelled and heaved with couples packed close together.

He remembered the laughter and the music and something came into his throat and he wanted to cry. The woman sensed it too and she put a slender, graceful hand on his arm.

"Do you remember that dance... our graduation dance? I can see you now. You had on a light blue evening gown that came all the way to the floor and you wore a corsage of some kind of white flowers. The light in your hair made it look all gold and you were the most beautiful creature in the world."

She laughed, entering into the spirit of the thing. "And Mr. Weeks, the assistant principal, asked me to dance and I let him have one dance... after all, he was the assistant principal."

"AND after the dance," he went on. "The rest of the crowd went down to eat, but you and I went to the little lunch counter around the corner and had some coffee and afterwards we walked home. It was exactly three blocks away. I think I can remember every step... every depression in the sidewalk. And when we got to your house we stood on the steps a long time, not saying anything, just looking at the night... and everything was golden around us."

He paused for a moment, staring straight ahead. "And then you said you had to go in... and you kissed me..." He laughed again and turned to look at the woman beside him. "I floated home on a cloud that night!"

She smiled and they sat there, silent, for a time, contemplating the memories they had conjured up out of the past.

At last they got up and the man looked at the woman beside him and smiled.

"Well, goodbye, Jean," he said. "It was wonderful seeing you again, but I'll have to be running along now. I'm supposed to meet my wife in front of the Metropolitan in about 10 minutes."

She looked at her watch and gasped. "Me, too," she exclaimed. "Why, it's almost five o'clock and I haven't finished my shopping yet. I'm afraid my husband's supper will be late tonight. Good-by!"

They hurried off across the park in opposite directions!
