PERPETUAL PATRIOT: Though but 33 years old, star Zachary Scott entertained the fighting men of World Wars I and II. When 8 years old he appeared in a skit at Navy Hospital, Biloxi, Miss., for convalescent vets of the first francas; during the second he toured Army and Navy hospitals with an entertainment unit.

OLDEST WHODUNIT: Warner Brothers' latest thriller, "Woman In White" is said to be the oldest whodunit classic ever filmed. It was written more than 100 years ago by Wilkie Collins, who is popularly acknowledged to have been the father of modern mystery yarns.

SHORT DRAMA: Lionel Barrymore, nearly 70 years of age, was seen to throw away his little black telephone book on the "Key Largo" set at Warners. "The numbers are no good anymore," he explained with a sigh. "All my contemporaries are dead!"

A REVEALING ROLE: Bulletin from the wardrobe department of her studio, says Jane Wyman's starring role opposite David Niven in "A Kiss In The Dark", is to be her most revealing characterization to date! — and bit literally. The bulk of Miss Wyman's dainty wardrobe is to be conspicuous by its brevity, consisting of assorted playsuits, all especially designed "to alluringly display a great deal of Miss Wyman."

The wardrobe also contains a special item: one moderately-sized turkish bath towel, in which, it is said, the star is to make at least one "eye-arresting appearance." The bulletin, however contained one very unnecessary paragraph. It is said that, in the play, Mr. Niven falls in love with Miss Wyman!

Anyone looking for a swashbuckling adventure yarn picturesquely backgrounding a dramatic triangle of two sisters after the same man will get his money's worth and more at the Roxy Theatre where M-G-M's new Lana Turner starring vehicle "Green Dolphin Street," starts Monday.

part that gives this talented young performer an opportunity to prove once and for all that glamour is the least striking of her talents as a dramatic actress.

Guests of the week: Mr. and Mrs. Grover Norton.

WITH THE ANGLERS

by George Hoare
Conditions for fly fishing last week were ever better than the week previous. Perhaps the rain made the difference. In certain spots they were hitting good for the first time of any account this season.

By all reports no one fly, streamer, or bucktail was taking. Some of the catches were made on small wet flies, others on minnow imitations, plain, sparsely dressed bucktails, and streamers that the trout must take for under-water insect life.

Dry flies also took their share. Others were caught on worms. Worm fishing is quite different and not in the same class as fly-fishing, however, it is an art that one does not acquire very quickly. The same goes for using minnows.

The right presentation means a strike regardless of what is being used. This could go on for ever, so

LUCKY ANGLERS

Roy Hilts Sr., Roy Jr. and Ronnie took 39 speckled trout one day last week. Some of the catch was made on flies.

Jack Crichton was angling for speckled trout one evening last week. He was using a dry fly with a natural float. He wasn't surprised when he took several nice speckled. He WAS surprised when he hooked a pair of nice browns. One never knows just where these browns are going to be. They get around.

Orval Rayner took several nice browns last week on a small wet fly.

Lorne Rayner also took some nice speckled the same evening. It was Lorne's first trip since his recent accident.

Chas. Hoare snagged two browns weighing and measuring, 18 1/2 inches, 2 lbs., 4 oz. and 19 inches, 2 lbs., 7 oz.

Chuck Norton of Glen Williams took a nice brown one evening on a fly tied by the writer.

Roy Hilts was out for browns over the week-end and snagged a few nice ones.

The Writer took several browns last week and over the week-end, most of them weighed between 1 1/2 lbs. and 1 3/4 lbs. and measured 15" to 17". They were taken on various streamers and bucktails. That's all for this week so good fishing until next.

Swung Bush Axe at 16, Lands and Forests Chief Ardent Angler, Hunter

by Richard Sheridan, in the Globe and Mail
As a youth, Harold Robinson Scott started into lumbering on the business end of a Lushman's axe. Now as Minister of Lands and Forests with the responsibility of administering 400,000 square miles of timber, he has more lumber to look after than he ever dreamed of.

The newest of Ontario cabinet ministers he was appointed to his present portfolio in November, 1946. Mr. Scott is the member for Peterborough. In the June 7th election, he was making his third bid for public office in that city. He was first elected to the legislature in 1943.

Figuratively speaking, he has lived on a diet of logs since he was a lanky youth of 16. At that age he went to work in a sawmill at Cobocook, north of Fenelon Falls. He felled trees, cut trails, drove the river and went through all the mill-yard and sawmill jobs before he finished up in business for himself, selling logs as finished lumber.

His energies are now directed to complete utilization of all species of wood. For that reason, he authorized the taking of an inventory of timber on Crown lands and from this inventory the species rate of regeneration will be determined.

Actually, the province is in the position of a business man taking stock," he explains. "When the stock taking is completed in 1952, we'll know what we've got and then be able to put it to the best possible use."

Coupled with the inventory are activities toward protecting the forest wealth of the province from the inroads of insects and fire. A laboratory at Saint Ste. Marie is concentrating on the pests so as to eradicate them, while a fleet of some 40 aircraft and a land army of rangers will be used to control fires.

In the over-all departmental policy there are plans to curtail the export of unprocessed logs, which will stop such exports from Crown lands within 10 years. New pulp mills will spring up in the north-western part of the province as a result of this policy and the whole economy of the province is bound to benefit.

Mr. Scott has another job which he tackles with relish, that of looking after fish and wildlife. He owned his first gun when eight years of age, and now has a small arsenal of 22 guns.

While an ardent angler, he likes to kid about fishing. He insists that he can land a fly exactly between his own shoulder blades two casts out of three, and his fish stories are as good as the other guy's.

In flying over 20,000 miles last year and landing in lakes which have the best fishing in the province, his one regret was that he never "wet a line."

On the serious side, however, he is remodeling and renovating all the fish hatcheries under his jurisdiction in an effort to build up production and keep the lakes and streams well stocked. He estimates there are more than a million lakes in the province. The number of biologists and game wardens are being increased.

In personal appearance, he is sandy-haired and ruddy complexioned, the latter undoubtedly resulting from the outdoor life he has followed. A six-footer, he weighs 200 pounds. Born at Shawbridge, Que., he learned to speak French in his youth but his conversation in this language is somewhat rusty from lack of use. A moderate smoker, he rolls his own cigarettes and when tiring of this switches to a pipe.

After four years' service in the First Great War, Mr. Scott came back to marry Miss Lucien Ellen Gray of Lindsay. They have no children.

How did he get into politics? Well he was never one to grizzle from the back seat. When he got the opportunity to get up in front, he just took it.

LONDON - HAMILTON - TORONTO - SUDBURY - WINDSOR - WILLOWDALE

It is easy to see how this Elizabeth Goudge novel of fiery romance in St. Pierre, colorful Channel Island seaport of the 1840's, and rugged New Zealand, was selected as the winner of M-G-M's first annual contest for the outstanding novel of the year, for it contains everything in the way of spectacular entertainment, including breathtakingly realistic scenes of an earthquake, the floundering and sinking of a magnificent Clipper ship, and a blood-curdling uprising of the dangerous New Zealand Maoris.
Moreover, the picture gives Lana Turner the role she has probably been awaiting for a long time—a
