THOUSANDS MORE FARMERS WILL USE TRACTORS

because The new Canadian-made Massey-Harris "Pony" has opened up a great new market for tractors

One year ago, Massey-Harris introduced a new small tractor . . . the "Pony" . . . with a full complement of mounted tools . . . to be made in its Canadian factory at Woodstock. Previously, all tractors used in Canada, were imported. Thus, Massey-Harris took two important steps which are bound to play a big part in Canadian prosperity during the years ahead.

The "Pony" opens up a great new market for tractors, both in Canada and in the export field. The last Canadian census showed nearly 500,000 farms still without tractors . . . many of which are small farms and market gardens where big tractor outfits are not practical. And there are a great many more thousands of small farms in the United States, in Europe, in Africa, and other countries where Massey-Harris products are sold. Almost every one of them is a prospect for a "Pony".

With the practical, economical "Pony" thousands more farmers will be able to use tractor power to do their work easier, quicker, and more profitably.

The manufacture of the "Pony" Tractor in Canada will provide jobs in the years ahead for Canadian workers . . . not only those employed in the Massey-Harris factory, but also those employed in the industries which supply materials, parts and services.

The great and growing demand for the "Pony", from the day of its first public demonstration, is evidence of its real need and place in Canadian and world agriculture.

Conservation Problem Explained to Lions

In a brief speech to fellow members of the Lions Club at their dinner meeting at the McGibbon House on Monday, Reeve Alex. MacLaren explained the desperate need for a conservation program in the Credit River Valley. Acres of land are being washed away each year, wells are drying up and fishing is becoming less profitable, he said, and deforestation has been the major cause. He is active in promoting the formation of a Credit Valley Authority which can start to deal with the problem.

Marshall Timbers was welcomed into the club and presented with his pin by Lion Chief Harold McClure. Lorne Peters reported that sales of draw tickets for the bandshell in the park were brisk but would have to be even better in the weeks to come if adequate funds were to be raised.

An outstanding musical attraction will be the Leaside Home Club trumpet band, numbering 40 pieces.

Lion Neil McLeod has completed plans for a gigantic display of fireworks to terminate the events of each evening.
