New Instructor at Brampton Flying Club

This week Bill Farr, president of the Brampton Flying Club announced the appointment of Boyd Siegel, ex R.C.A.F. instructor and University of Toronto dental student as instructor. Flying instruction will now be given throughout the week to the many men, women, boys and girls who have shown interest and wish to learn to fly.

Mr. Siegel has had considerable experience and has spent 2400 hours in the air as first pilot of 33 different types of aircraft. It has been the experience of the club that anyone can learn to fly on either of the present two club aircraft. Already 10 men have been taught to fly solo and of this number five will soon obtain their private licences. Among the 25 students now under instruction are three girls, and from results so far they are equal to the men in flying ability.

WE DON'T PEDDLE

With the acquisition of an instructor, Brampton Flying Club now equal to clubs with many more years of development. It is just two years since the club bought a surplus Tiger Moth from War Assets and began to operate with cow pastures and hay fields as "home." During that time the Club derived revenue to operate from carrying passengers. Many people of Brampton saw their town from the air for the first time. The club now has a permanent base just west of Brampton and the field is licensed by the Department of Transport. The amount of work which went into the construction of the field, hangar, and other facilities is apparent to anyone who visits the airport. It is a credit to the members of the organization for the progress they have made without official subsidy or support. It is to be hoped that other towns similar to Brampton may follow this example and equip themselves with an airport. Just as it was years ago when cars needed roads, planes will only become more useful as there are more airports to accommodate them.
