THE STILL SMALL VOICE

Cold blew the winds in chill December,
 Across the world king winter ruled supreme.
 One evening by the fire, I well remember
 I fell asleep, and strangely, dreamed a dream.

Come, said a voice of wistful sadness,
 Back with me along the vanished years.
 Back through all your pain, and every gladness,
 Back through the mists of all your tears.

You passed this way, life's sea was strewn with shipwrecks,
 Help me, the cry, the wild waves rise and fall.
 I am fighting for the shore, through pain and heartbreaks
 I am wondering is there any shore at all.

From your safe shore did you help to retrieve him,
 Or try to pull him from that surging tide.
 Or were you so busy, you just had to leave him,
 Did you pass by him, on the other side.

Here, said the voice of wistful sadness,
 We find the thorn-rammed desert of "They Say".
 Its blistering sands the grave of many a goodness,
 Don't you remember, you also came this way.

"They say" she was not good, no saint, no saint,
 "They say" that he to many a vice was prone.
 "They say", "They say" with an unaided implication,
 Did you like to listen and help to pass it on.

If you did my friend, you helped to mar Creation,
 It's not for you to judge, the Scriptures say.
 If you had borne their trials, faced their temptation,
 Would you have any finer been, than they?

Fearful I woke, the sad voice faded,
 The white moon, shed cold silver on the snow.
 Forgive me, Lord, for those I have not aided,
 Forbid, I judge, the things I do not know.

Glen Ducks Featured In Homemaker Column

Under the heading "A Lesson in Faith" this item, submitted by Mrs. A. E. Dawson of the Glen Road appeared in the "Homemaker" column of the Toronto Globe and Mail recently.

At our home here, on the banks of the Credit River, we have living with us a family of muscovy ducks. Besides papa and mamma duck, there are 18 adorable ducklings, now about a month old. Seventeen of these are big sturdy fellows, but the 18th is tiny. Despite this, she is full of high spirits and is naturally everybody's favorite. We have named her "Baby", and I have a little story to tell you about her.

One day recently, mamma duck decided to take her family for their first swim across the stream. The river here, though shallow, runs very swift and strong, so I was not greatly surprised when the family returned an hour later — minus Baby. Later in the afternoon, being on the river bank I heard a loud peeping from across the stream. "Get the wading boots and come quick," I called to my daughter. "I've found Baby."

Soon daughter was fording the stream, a basket in her arm in which she hoped to carry the little duck to safety. But before she was half way across, Baby had made her own decision. With one last desperate peep she launched herself onto the rushing water. Sadly we watched the little ball of yellow feather being carried down stream. "Goodbye Baby we thought, it was nice knowing you."

But by some miracle the little duck landed 200 feet further down, but on our side of the river. Slowly and painfully she made her way over the rocks and through the long grass. It took her a long time but she finally struggled through.

"Surely," I thought "there is a lesson here. When a baby duck could show such faith and courage well, it speaks for itself doesn't it?"

ALLOA QUITS JUNIOR FARMER LACROSSE

Meeting in their second game of the semi-final Junior Lacrosse playoffs, Alloa and Streetsville played to a goal tie last Thursday night at Norval Recreation Centre. The game was played under protest, Streetsville claiming the Alloa goal, Clark, was ineligible because he had played O.L.A. lacrosse this season. The protest was allowed and the game ordered to be re-played last night. Alloa to use another goalie in place of Clark. Alloa refused to play unless Clark was in goal and withdrew from the league. Streetsville and Norval were then teamed in a semi-final series, the winter to meet Ebenezer for the championship, and the first game was played last night.
