Letters from England

I am a widow, 84 years of age and all friends and relatives dead. You can think of the pleasure your parcel gave me. M. L.

Words cannot express my sincere gratitude. J. J.

My husband is an invalid and we appreciate the kindness shown to us. It was a real surprise as we did not know anything about it. M. M.

Today is mother's 77th birthday and it was a pleasure to watch her face as she unpacked all the good things in the parcel. Mrs. G. H.

These are but a few excerpts from letters received from appreciative English people who received food parcels last year from the Georgetown Lions Club.

Restless Veterans Still Set Rapid Migration Pace

Veterans who acquired a habit of moving rather extensively over the earth's surface during the war have not shed their mobility with their uniforms.

The American Society of Planning Officials reports that of the 11 million U. S. residents who have moved from their former homes to new localities since V-J Day, the most highly-mobile group comprises ex-G.I.s. Almost 12 per cent of all male veterans moved one or more times as civilians since the war ended.

Occupationally speaking, most mobile group of migrants in the postwar U. S. has been professional and semi-professional workers. Analysis of Bureau of the Census statistics reveals that other highly-mobile occupational groups during the first 12 months of peace were farm laborers and farm foremen.

Least mobile groups, on the other hand, were farm owners, farm managers and service workers—except domestics.

In terms of total numbers of persons changing localities, more women moved than men: In the year following V-J Day, there were 5.7 million female migrants (8.1 per cent of all females), compared to slightly more than five million male migrants (7.4 per cent of all males).

Leading reason for postwar migration has been to find or take new jobs. Six million people changed localities for this purpose. Another two million Americans changed home towns simply to find adequate housing. Other major reasons given for postwar moves were to attend school (especially G.I.s), health and marriage.

First Sheep in U. S. Came From Coronado Expedition

The first sheep in the United States came by way of Mexico. Coronado explored the southwestern part of the United States in the year 1540. He took along 5,000 sheep for food. But Coronado was a poor sheepman. Most of the sheep were lost.

The Indians got some of the sheep of the early Spanish explorers. These sheep were coarse-wooled churros. The churros became the first Navajo sheep in the Southwest.

In the East, sheep were landed at Jamestown in 1609. Other colonists in the East brought sheep, too. These first sheep were used almost entirely as food.

As late as 1793, Andrew Craigie of Cambridge, Mass., was presented with a pair of merinos. He had them butchered and ate them. He didn't know that the two merinos were worth about $4,000.

By 1803, 10 years later, America was merino-crazy. At least, some people thought so. One farmer paid $3,000 for a merino ram.

Cleaning Machine Parts

"Soft grit" blasting with ground corncobs and rice hulls was developed during the war for the removal of hard carbon deposits from cylinders and pistons of aircraft engines undergoing overhaul. The process, which originated at the U. S. northern regional research laboratory, now is finding extended use in other industrial fields. At the same time it is providing a market for two farm by-products and has given rise to small rural plants that process corncobs for this use. Essentially soft-grit blasting consists of forcing a mixture of ground cobs and whole rice hulls, by air pressure, against the metal to be cleaned. Almost every kind of deposit except hard mill scale can be removed. Since the soft grit is not abrasive, the cleaning process does not cause dimensional changes in the parts and use of hand tools is not required.

Now is the Time

To avoid unnecessary delays during the busy season, all machinery should be given a complete checking over at least once a year. This makes it possible to change or repair worn parts before they cause serious damage to other parts. In checking a machine all the moving parts should be removed and thoroughly washed in gasoline to remove dirt and dust which mix with old grease to form a grinding compound. The bearings should be removed, cleaned and checked for wear. If worn, they should be replaced. Any bent or broken parts of the machine should be taken down straightened, repaired or replaced with new ones. It is far cheaper to replace a bearing than to buy a new axle or other shaft, just as it is cheaper to repair a slightly used machine rather than to buy a new one at present day prices.

How Much Sleep Needed

The amount of sleep varies with the individual. The general state of health, temperament, type of work and climate are all influential factors. Each person can easily judge for himself how much sleep he needs to feel well and accomplish what he sets out to do. The average adult, however, will get along very well with 8 hours sleep during every night. Sleep quotas for children are more specific. Youngsters from two to three years of age require 12 to 14 hours sleep with a two-hour nap during the day. Four- and five-year-old children need 11 to 12 1/2 hours of sleep with a nap in the afternoon, and children from 6 to 10 years require from 10 to 13 hours sleep. From 10 to 16 years of age, at least 9 or 10 hours sleep is advisable.

BIKE RIDERS MENACE ON MAIN STREET

Many complaints are being received by the local police force about children riding bicycles on the sidewalks, particularly in the Main Street area. This is dangerous for pedestrians, particularly elderly people, and the police have given numerous warnings to children. Parents are requested to tell their children this must cease or further action will have to be taken by the police.
