AUTUMN MEMORIES

Just for a space old earth seems sleeping,
Smiling contented in the autumn's glow,
Fulfilled her tryst with spring and summer keeping,
Soon to be mantled with the winter's snow.
Not for her regrets, no useless sighing
For spring-time past, nor summer's fragrant breeze;
All human traits of sentiment defying,
Calmly indifferent to the falling leaves.
Not so with us, past scenes again come thronging,
The dear dead June, the Springs of long ago,
And Autumn's aching beauty brings the longing
For forms and faces that we used to know.
"It's a long, long way to Tipperary"
The marching song of men who knew no fear;
By the flickering camp-fire "Bonnie Mary O Grogarry"
Memories grow fonder with each passing year.
"Tell them at home I'll not be coming,"
Said he who'd sung and fought in mud and rain,
One Autumn night (the air with conflict humming),
Smiling bravely through a mist of pain.
Shafts of wicked flame that stabbed night's curtain,
Gray death whistling in the night time breeze,
Nightmarish scene, a tottering world uncertain,
A still form lying midst the Autumn leaves.
The padre's voice, calm, confident, believing,
"To him who overcometh, eternal life I give,
Be Thou this day our comrade's soul receiving,
Thy leaves that wither yet again shall live."
Bill Taylor, Water St.
