Chatting

By M.H.B.

SO HERE IT IS, 1950—only one day old as we sit down to chat with you once again. And what a day it is—slate-gray with fog and very wet. An ideal day, you might say, for reflection, meditation, and the making of New Year's resolutions.

Wentler, who popularized the idea of making New Year's resolutions, (Guess it might well have been a natural impulse in every one.) Heard one say, in an article in the "Herald," that he would allow himself since this is the first day of the year to become a vegetarian. And he said, "I shall do this for one year, and if I don't like it, I'll stop." This is a very good idea, and one that should be followed by every one.

It, because the young minister concerned has long since moved from town, and don't believe he subscribes to the Herald. He came in to the office one day to bring in his church folder, and he had his youngest of about three years with him. The little one was no longer scared of the camera when he saw the photographer with our lady of the week. He was smiling and his daddy was smiling too.

It is a very good idea, and one that should be followed by every one. It is a very good idea, and one that should be followed by every one. It is a very good idea, and one that should be followed by every one.
