New CBC Radio Show Features Small Towns

A new weekly series of half-hour radio programs dedicated to Ontario's smaller communities began Monday, April 17, at 8 p.m. on station CBL, Toronto. The series, called "Their Story", will feature each week a different community within the listening area of CBL, and will give on-the-spot accounts of the efforts being made in the towns and villages to make life happier or safer.

The idea originated in the office of S. Chley Wood, editor of the weekly Oakville-Trafalgar Journal. Mr. Wood explained that in his travels around smaller Ontario centres, he had frequently been astonished by some of their stories of accomplishment. He gave a few examples.

"Did you ever stop to think what happens when a community of two hundred and fifty people decides to build an artificial ice arena, or when a flood wipes out the greater part of a residential area, or when an entire water system gives out? Their stories should be told, not only because of their value as stories, but also because other communities may some day be faced with the same type of problem."

The idea took root and the Neighbourly News team of commentator Don Fairbairn and producer Reid Forsee were assigned with S. Casey Wood, to visit a town or village each week, and report Their Story. The first broadcast told how the eighty-four community-minded people of Honeywood, Ontario, planned and built themselves a thirty thousand dollar community centre. The second program, on the 24th, will be about the town of Brampton.

Around the Home ...

Was I fooled yesterday! I had been travelling in the Muskoka area and dropped in on an old friend who had just purchased a fairly large summer hotel. As we relaxed before a comforting blaze in the fireplace I began to rave about the large artistic wrought-iron hinges on all the doors of the huge common room. My host chuckled and said "Come on over and examine them more closely". I imagine my amazement when I found my "artistic wrought-iron hinges" were made of cardboard! There's no denying the fact they were attractive.

Step Easy

With these April showers I find it difficult to walk across lawns where there is no sidewalk. Just yesterday, right in my own back yard, I sunk almost to my rubber tops on a dirt path that I intended to surface last fall. I am still in a quandary as to which to use—solid paving or stepping stones. In case some others are in the same dilemma, I've had illustrated two or three of the best methods I have seen used.

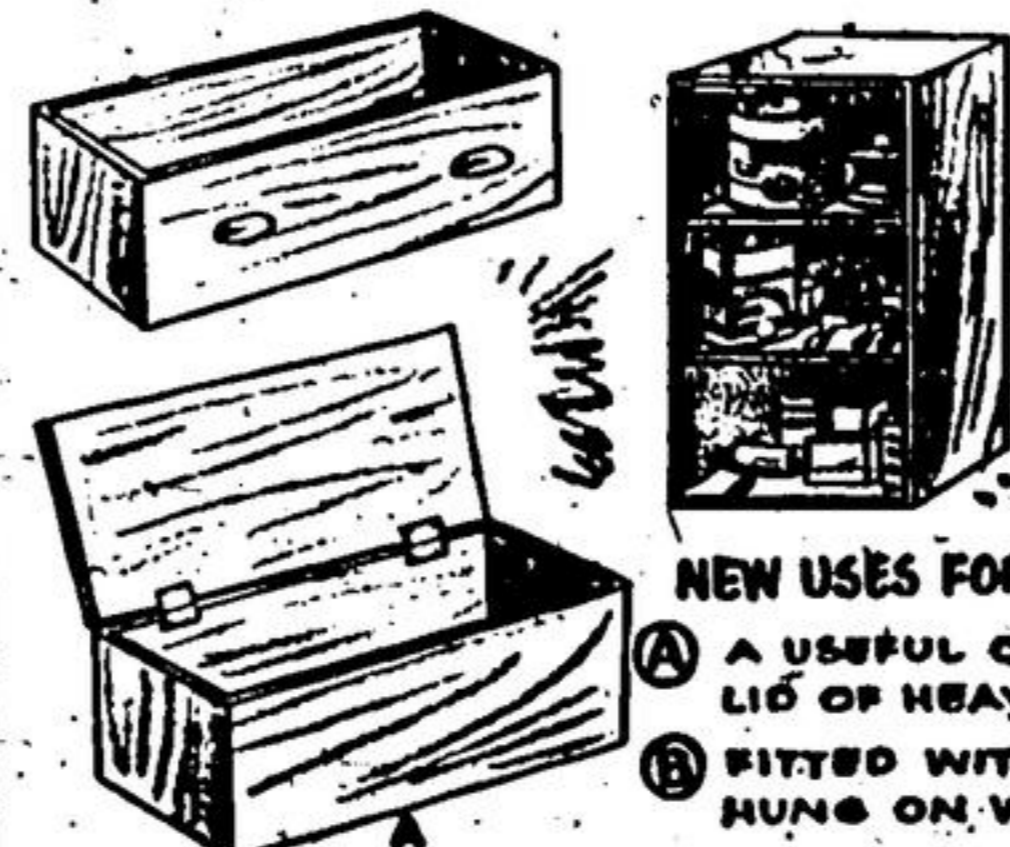

There's still plenty of usefulness left in an old bureau drawer. The chap across the street has put some to good use about his home. Two of his ideas are shown and both are practical. Junior's toys are stored in the one that is covered and painted a gay color. The other one, made into strong shelves, is in the basement to hold his partially used paint cans.

Make Your Old Linoleum Smile

When I moved my family into our present house the agent remarked, "Of course, you'll have to lay a new linoleum in the kitchen". Would he be surprised to see the same linoleum five years and several coats of paint later? It is extremely easy to stipple a painted floor and what is even more important at this time of the year—it won't show the dirt!
