Idaho Parachutes Beavers To Many Primitive Areas

Idaho's state fish and game department has inaugurated a unique program of parachuting beavers from an airplane.

A major resource in Idaho, not only for the 7,500 pelts marketed annually, beavers are regarded by the game department as nature's little helpers because they build dams that prevent soil erosion and retain water in the upper level streams until it is needed in late summer.

But beavers, when they get the idea of building a dam, don't always build it where it is most needed. Sometimes they divert irrigation waters. So the state of Idaho took the matter in hand and is giving beavers a little direction.

The beavers are dropped by parachute from an airplane over inaccessible primitive areas, at an altitude of about 500 to 600 feet. Each beaver is placed in a clamshell box which is hinged at the bottom. Two inner tubes are pulled around the box and tied together at the top with a string; the weight of the beaver holding the box shut during the descent.

When the beaver strikes earth the box springs open. Male and females are dropped, because the game department is also interested in propagation of the fur bearers.

To keep the air lift going, the state fish and game department has developed a program with every caretaker trapper to provide alive during the summer at least 10 per cent of the number of pelts he is permitted to take during the winter.

Many More Nurses Needed, Nursing Council Reports

A shortage exists in adequately trained nurses, according to a report, "Nursing for the Future," prepared for the National Nursing Council by Esther Lucile Brown. For reaching changes in nursing practice and in nursing education are recommended.

The expectation that the nursing shortage would be relieved at the expiration of wartime demands has not been realized, says the report. In many hospitals, wards and even floors remain closed because there are not enough nurses to permit reopening. Planned expansion of health services has sometimes not been possible because nurses required for such preventive programs had to be assigned to the care of those already sick.

Nursing with its opportunities for helping others, has a deep intrinsic appeal, but if enough young women are to be attracted to this service it must be supported, believes Dr. Brown, by better salaries, more stable working conditions, and an environment free from authoritarianism. More men nurses are needed. Nurses who have married and whose children are now grown should be retrained and returned to useful service. Students and personnel should be recruited, recommends Dr. Brown, "without regard to sex, marital status, economic background, or ethnic, racial and religious origins."

'Best Buy' Meat

"Battle of rising meat costs" is being fought by every homemaker. And one way to save a little is by buying veal and certain pork cuts. Extension meat specialists say that in general shoppers will find veal more reasonable than other meat. Veal rump roast, boned veal shank and other boneless stew meat are generally good buys. Pork "best buys" are probably the Boston butt, which has little bone, and the picnic fresh or co. ed. Often called the picnic ham, this cut is sold with or without the shank. Pork liver is usually the lowest priced kind of liver. With high food value and little waste, it's a good buy. Tongue is one of the most economical beef cuts. It has little waste. Stock from cooking tongue makes good soup stock.

Corinth Canal Reopened

First major rehabilitation project of the U. S. foreign air program was reconstruction of the Corinth canal, one of the world's largest sea channels, which was closed for more than seven years by wartime demolitions. A lockless cut nearly four miles long through the Isthmus of Corinth, the canal shortens the route from the Adriatic to Piraeus and the Aegean sea by 202 miles. The Corinth cut is 75 feet wide and 26 feet deep. At one point it banks rise 250 feet above sea level. It can accommodate vessels up to 10,000 tons displacement—slightly larger than Liberty ships. The canal has been reopened.

Early Champion of Freedom

For hundreds of years and for all nations William Tell has symbolized the age-old fight of freemen against tyranny. He was a typical Swiss. Whether William Tell actually shot an arrow through the apple on his son's head and later killed Gessler, the tyrant who ordered the feat, is open to historical argument. Legend says that Hermann Gessler, a cruel sheriff, placed his hat on a pole in the town square of Altdorf, with orders that his hat receive deference from all passersby. In punishment for ignoring Gessler's hat, Tell was ordered to shoot an apple from the head of his son. Later, Tell shot Gessler.

New Clubhouse is Planned For Brampton Golf Club

A new $10,000 clubhouse is planned for Brampton Golf Club and it is expected that work will begin immediately on excavation for the foundation. The building will be of frame construction with a gable roof and will overlook the 9th green, with entrances to the locker rooms facing the hill. Men's locker rooms and showers will be in the basement and the main floor will include ladies' locker, rooms, showers and the main lounge, dining room and kitchen. Plans also call for moving the present clubhouse to a new location where it will be used as a pro shop. The front of the building facing the hill is to be landscaped with flagstone walks and there will be accommodation for lawn chairs and outdoor tables.

Improvement plans at the golf course also include reconstruction of the 9th green and the first tee.
