Sports Round-up

by Steamer
With only five games left in the regular Intermediate schedule things don't look bright for Georgetown's entry. The Raiders, going the season's route with some inexperienced youngsters have only managed to win three games. Oakville, Fergus and Acton are grouped in "A" and Waterdown and Milton in "B". Georgetown, playing "C" group will have a bye into the OBA play-offs, probably the first week in August.

There is lots of the old college try among the players. Some games have just been lost by a hair and inexperience. But under the coaching of Fat Walters and Scotty Patterson, the younger members of the team should play a much improved brand of ball next year.

The juveniles have certainly made up for what the Intermediates lack. Going great guns recently, these lads are tied for first place with Oakville. Campbellville places next with Milton holding down the cellar. Drawing their share of the crowds, the juveniles will undoubtedly have a player or two ready for Intermediate play next season.

Everything in General
The brightest aspect of our Intermediate ball team, says manager Bruce MacKenzie is the uniforms.

Harvey Chappel was seen rounding the bank corner with a suitcase Monday morning. There must be gold in that that Quebec fastball league.

Scotty Patterson, in an interview with the press, says Rene Martin and he are batting 500. You didn't say which league that was in, Scotty.

Highlight of the Week

Joe Scott, well known Limehouse sportsman, was umpiring a game last week between Limehouse and Businessmen in the softball league. Limehouse, trailing by one run, had the bases loaded with one out. The ball was hit in the infield, the play was made at third base, and a doubtful decision was registered by the ump. In the melee following, two of the Limehouse players were found to be occupying second base. When questioned about this, Joe replied from his position behind home plate "Are they still there? I can't see them." Maybe there is some truth in the old adage umpires are blind as a bat.

Over A Barrel

A lot of the boys in town will view the antics of Major Lloyd Hill of Niagara Falls with keen interest. His unsuccessful attempt to go over the falls "in a barrel" on Sunday was headline news in the dailies.

After arriving in England the summer of 1941, "Charlie" of C Company of the Lorne Scots was billeted in New Martingale barracks at Borden Camp. As we recall the beds were hard, the grub was hard, so was the CSM.

On being "broke off" for the day, most of us just continued being broke, but we always found something to occupy our after-supper hours, such as pack drill and sanitary fatigue. We had only been in England a short time, and most of the NCO's were strangers—that is, all except Corporal (with pay) Major Hill. Believe it or not, that was his real name and with his nerve and

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

It was 1938. On the old Welland Canal, four Regina oarsmen trained vigorously for the Canadian Henley Regatta. The odds were all against them for they lacked an experienced coach... and had trained on a shallow, man-made Regina Lake during the great Prairie drought.

On the Henley's first day the quartet scored an upset by winning the junior four-oared event. The experts goggled... but the best was yet to come. Showing the Regatta's finest burst of speed, in the senior fours the weathered, outstroked champion oarsmen from Canada and the U.S., and walked away with the prized Dominion championship.
