Crests, Proficiency Awards At Stay-at-Home Camp Closing

The highly successful Stay-at-Home Camp came to an end Friday when closing ceremonies were held in St. John's Church Hall. Rev. J. L. Self, town recreational director and who took a leading part in superintending the camp, was chairman. Lion Club president Jack Armstrong presented crests to the winning tribes in each of the four groups and Rev. Charles Gower, president of Georgetown Ministerial Association, presented proficiency awards to the children who had qualified.

GRC crests were presented to the members of the winning teams in softball and lacrosse and Alex MacLaren, president of Georgetown Recreation Commission officiated at this. The ladies of St. John's W.A. served refreshments to the large number of campers and parents present.

The Stay-at-Home Camp was jointly sponsored by the Lions Club, Ministerial Association and Recreation Commission. This year, the second year of operation, total enrollment was 364 with average attendance of 285. The camp embraced a variety of activities including swimming at Norval YMCA pool, picnics at Erin and Centre Island, handicraft, Bible study and organized games. Assisting Mr. Self in directing the camp were Rev. Alex Calder, Rev. Alex Cowan, Rev. Charles Gower, Rev. John M. Smith, Archdeacon W. G. O. Thompson, J. L. Lambert, Joan Latimer, Eileen Prust, Sylvia Lambert, Jim Kirkwood and Bill MacCormack.
