PLAN IMPROVEMENTS TO MILTON FAIR GROUNDS

A meeting of the officers, directors and members of the Halton Agricultural Society was held in the Court House, Milton, on Thursday afternoon. The meeting gave approval for the purchase of additional land required to provide parking facilities and with a view to eventually moving the present race track. In this connection the Halton Society has made an offer to purchase between five and six acres of land which adjoins the present property directly to the south. The meeting also expressed approval for the erection of a hall approximately 120 feet in length. It is anticipated that the hall will be erected in 1951 in time for the annual Milton Fair on September 28th and 29th. The hundredth anniversary of the Halton Society is to be celebrated in 1952 and committees are already at work in connection with various features for the event.

CANADIAN PLOWMEN ABROAD

by V. C. PORTEOUS * Director
ONTARIO PLOWMEN'S ASSOCIATION

This is the sixth of a series of weekly stories which V. C. Porteous, a director of the Ontario Plowmen's Association, is writing about the visit of Capada champion plowmen to the British Isles, Belgium, Denmark and the Netherlands.

Edinburgh, Scotland: In writing about our visit to the land of the Scots I'm sorry I can't report that Herb Jarvis or Hugh Leslie discovered the hiding place of the Stone of Scone. But I think we did discover why the Scotsman living abroad never forgets the home of his ancestors I am sure it must be because it is a land of so much history and tradition.

Perhaps this sounds like a sweeping statement for our first letter from Scotland but we have been here nearly a week now. We went first to Glasgow by train from Walkerton, Ontario, where we had our first night in a hotel. We then went to Edinburgh, where we had our second night in a hotel. We then went to London, where we had our third night in a hotel. We then went to London, where we had our fourth night in a hotel. We then went to London, where we had our fifth night in a hotel.

We then went to London, where we had our sixth night in a hotel. We then went to London, where we had our seventh night in a hotel. We then went to London, where we had our eighth night in a hotel. We then went to London, where we had our ninth night in a hotel. We then went to London, where we had our tenth night in a hotel.

his poetry. The city of Ayr is a fair size and has many old but substantial buildings fronting on its narrow, crooked streets. In its shops I noticed that men's clothes were more reasonably priced than at home but other articles are about the same.

It was an interesting motor trip from Ayr to Edinburgh and we passed through some fine farming country. It was rather spotty, however, with many stretches of land fit only for grazing. I think this is because the rock formations here are close to the earth's surface and there are many outcroppings.

Seeing Edinburgh was like re-viewing Scottish and English history. We visited Holyroodhouse. It was formerly an abbey and then became the palace of the kings and queens of Scotland and was occupied for a time by the ill-fated Queen of Scots. Later we visited Edinburgh Castle which is perched on a high point overlooking the city. It contains many historical relics and we were quite taken with the ancient and modern arm and armour on display in the castle hall. Some date back to the days of the Roman occupation in the first century of the Christian era.

In the castle we saw a dungeon which was said to have been built by the Romans and whose existence remained unknown for centuries. It was discovered in 1812. It's certainly a grim place.

Herbert Jarvis

It seems to me that in the years to come these men will serve as a standing vote of thanks from the many teams of Canadian plowmen who have been so hospitably received here. They will also remind the good people of Workington of the affectionate regard of Canadians for the Mother country.

Hugh Leslie

In Glasgow we stayed at the first hotel outside of London that had enough heat to satisfy us, although some had meter electric heaters which supply about two hours heat for a shilling. But for one whose blood has thinned out a little these meter-heaters are not only inconvenient but damn costly. Certainly the people over here are not used to heated buildings such as we have in Canada.

We went down to Kilmarnock to visit the big implement factory there. This was especially interesting for Herb Jarvis, the champion horse plowman because he works in an implement plant in Toronto. After a tour of the plant we had lunch at the famous sea resort of Troon. From there we motored to Ayr, and to nearby Alloway, the birthplace of Robert Burns. We inspected the thatched roof cottage where the Plowman Poet had lived and the museum alongside. Then we saw the Brigadoon, described by Burns in Another historic place we visited was St. Giles Cathedral, one of the finest churches in the British Isles. It is a huge edifice but has only modest equipment in the way of pews and seating accommodation. We were told that many of the nobility worship there.

Yesterday we went down to Perth to attend the Aberdeen Angus sales. These are run much the same as our big sales but I noticed that they did not require the purchaser to sign a slip to certify the sale, as they do at home. The quality of the cattle was of a high order but it seemed to me that the herds are not as fully accredited as they are in Canada. There were about 600 head to be sold in two days and while we were there they were selling at the rate of about 40 head an hour.

We also visited the Loch Lomond country and "we've taken the high road and the low road" but still feel we haven't seen enough of Scotland. The reason is that we have to stick to our itinerary and now must leave for the big North of Ireland international plowing match near Belfast. The boys are well and anxious to pit their talents with the best at the match. The chances are that it will be over and you will know the results before my next letter reaches you. That letter will be the last of the series.
