How to Insure a High Yield of Legumes by an Ample Supply of Phosphorus

1. WHY IS PHOSPHORUS NEEDED FOR HIGH YIELDS?

Legumes are heavy users of phosphorus and necessary to build their extensive root systems—and consequently require an abundant supply of it. Thus, high yields are dependent on a good supply of both Phosphorus and Calcium. Both these elements are supplied in liberal quantities by AERO* Phos FLORIDA NATURAL PHOSPHATE, as it contains 33% P₂O₅ (Phosphorus) and 48% CaO (Calcium).

2. HOW COULD AERO* Phos BENEFIT A STAND OF LEGUMES?

Legumes and grasses can use Phosphorus efficiently when top-dressed on established stands. And AERO* Phos is the most economical way to supply Phosphorus.

3. WHY IS ALFALFA OFTEN DIFFICULT TO ESTABLISH?

Many growers find it difficult to establish Alfalfa because of lack of Phosphorus and Calcium in the soil. Alfalfa may also require additional Nitrogen and Potash if the soil is low in these elements.

To offset these lacks, a good application—1,000 to 2,000 lbs. per acre—of AERO* Phos should be made to the soil and well diaked in. If a nurse crop is to be used, add 500 lbs. per acre of a 4-12-10 fertilizer.

4. WHY ALFALFA THRIVES WELL ON AERO* Phos?

Alfalfa has an extensive root system that comes into contact with the fine particles of AERO* Phos and is able to absorb large amounts of the Phosphorus and Calcium which it supplies. . . thus insuring its high yield.

WARNS DANGERS OF INDIAN POKE

Georgetown, Ont., April 27th, 1951

Dear Sir:

A small note in your paper stated that Indian Poke was the basic ingredient for a new drug for high blood pressure. We have been asked if we supply this weed. We do not supply it for this reason. . . It is a deadly poison. It is only used in minute quantity usually in tincture form not more than six drops dose. It is a cardiac depressant and reduces the pulse with alarming state, it also acts therefore on the arteries to which it is a sedative. It was used for inflammatory conditions Chorea and epileptic fits, also pneumonia Cancer and scrofula. . . It is a deobstruent and surpasses iodine for this purpose. We state however, that it is deadly in action — the antidote is morphine or opium in ginger. We have therefore much better herbs for this condition. We do not recommend any poison in our treatment. . . We trust this will clear up any enquiry. We shall be pleased to give a fuller description of this weed anyone interested.

Yours faithfully,
William Broughton
