"I'D CLIMB THE HIGHEST MOUNTAIN"

The Finest Family Picture of the Year Comes to Georgetown for 4 Heart Warming Days Starting Mon., May 28th

Twentieth Century-Fox in its 25 years of hit making has "timed every phase of the human comedy, has presented to the screen many memorable characters. Now in 1951, they bring you the story of an American backwoods town and its hero, Parson Bill Thompson. With this picture, another hit is added to the Hall of Fame... another great portrayal to the list of those you will always remember!

"I'd climb the Highest Mountain" is a tenderly unfolded, heart-warming story of a small backwoods town and of a two-fisted minister who leads the way in making his community a better place to live in. But it's not the story of just one man and his family, it's about all folks — the good and the bad — the dramatic things and funny things that happen to them. It's all about a real love, too, and fast-stepping horses, horse-shoe pitchin' and Sunday School picnics. Its humor makes you laugh from the heart and its song hits are the all-time hits of yesterday — "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree", "When You and I Were Sweet Sixteen", and "Silvery Moon."

Filed in Technicolor and in the great screen tradition of "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "Stars

In My Crown" it towers over even these pictures with the strength and stature of a giant. It has to offer an unforgettable and beautiful movie experience for the whole family — glorious colour for the eye, deep spiritual conflict for the mind, rich humor for the soul, racing thrills and poignant romance to touch the heart.

Co-starring in "I'd Climb the Highest Mountain" are Susan Hayward and William Lundigan, and each of these already illustrious players rises to a new height in his role. This great motion picture affords both of them new breadth of characterization and power of appeal. No less skilful are the supporting players. These include Rory Calhoun, a rugged newcomer, and Barbara Bates, a lovely young actress of genuine ability. Others are Gene Lockhart, as a tough-minded parishioner, Lynn Bari and the redoubtable old favorite character actresses Ruth Donnelly and Kathleen Lockhart.

It is with deep and heartfelt pleasure that we publish this review of a most unusual and beautiful motion picture. We suggest that you see it and experience its down to earth thrill yourself — and take the family with you. "I'd
