Soap Bubbles Prove Useful In Experimental Studies

Scientists have resorted to blowing soap bubbles in an effort to find out what makes metals strong, says Sir Lawrence Bragg of Cambridge University, England. Nobel prize winner in physics in 1915.

Soap bubbles, Sir Lawrence explained, have proved more useful than anything else tried so far in constructing a working model of the crystal structure of a metal. A cluster of bubbles, he said, behaves much like the cluster of atoms making up a metal crystal, and lasts "an hour or so," which is long enough to permit experiments.

The bubble-blowing studies were undertaken, according to Sir Lawrence, because science as yet has no satisfactory theory of metal strength, despite the enormous amount of empirical knowledge about the mechanical properties of metal which has been calculated through countless investigations of the metals and alloys so important in modern technology.

"On the theoretical side, we know the way atoms are arranged in the perfect structure of metal crystals, and the theoretical physicists can tell us much about the forces of attraction and repulsion which keep these structures together," he stated. "There is no bridge, however, between theory and the empirical knowledge of mechanical properties. We cannot calculate from first principles the point at which a metal ceases to respond elastically and yields with consequent permanent deformation."

Guam's Dietary Standards Raised by Modern Bakery

Eight thousand American residents of the tiny Pacific outpost of Guam are getting fresh enriched bread daily, plus a wide assortment of pastries, thanks to the production know-how of the American baking industry and the resourcefulness of a technician who built a modern bakery using miscellaneous equipment which weathered the Japanese invasion.

The technician is Arthur R. DeLong, well-known American bakery official, who was drafted by the government to help restore Guam's dietary standards to a pre-war level.

DeLong scoured through shoulder-high vegetation last spring to salvage bakery equipment still resting where it had been placed preparatory to the invasion of Japan in 1945. To this he added machinery originally employed in Guam's pre-war bakery, still complete except for certain gear levers. These, he believes, the beleaguered marines used for clubbing Japs when Guam was invaded.

Now operating at full capacity, DeLong's bakery produces each day 1,300 two-pound loaves of enriched bread, 1,000 cakes, and a wide assortment of cakes and small pastries.

Don't Shake Paint

Shaking of paint, varnish and lacquer products, especially varnishes and enamels, is likely to result in minute air bubbles which may cause pin prick blisters on the finished job. Such products should be carefully and thoroughly stirred before use and then "boxed" by pouring two or three times from one container to another. Finally, straining the finish through an old silk stocking or fine cloth will remove any specks or lumps which may have been missed in the stirring. If the user desires maximum assurance of a perfect finish, this procedure is especially advised when a finish has been previously opened and left standing, with possible development of a skin.

Program for Winter Driving

Although traffic is relatively light during winter months, compensation must be made for decreased visibility and icy road conditions. To offset these hazards the following program is suggested: (1) Early starts to insure completion of trips before dusk and to minimize the temptation to drive at speeds too high for winter road conditions. (2) Moderate speeds at all times and sharp reductions of speeds at intersections, to compensate for the poorer traction and visibility for both pedestrians and cars. (3) A generous extra margin of safety in passing or following cars. (4) Make sure car is adequately ventilated as a defense against drowsiness behind the wheel, and the hazard of carbon monoxide poisoning.
