Agriculture at the CNE

The best growing season in recent years gives promise of the greatest agricultural show in the history of the Canadian National Exhibition. Sam Foster, CNE agricultural representative, predicted today. With farmers looking for an early and abundant harvest, every phase of agriculture should be represented with animals or produce in the best possible condition at the Exhibition. On August 24 to September 8th. Last year's exhibition saw a new attendance record established with 2,723,000 persons, passing through the turnstile, and a new one-day record set on the second Saturday with 283,000 entering the Park. The vast majority visit the agricultural displays, and this year their visit will be made more pleasant by the re-decoration of the cattle barns in a cool pastel yellow, with a new ventilation system, improved lighting and new portable stalls. The stalls have been changed to permit arrangement of cattle in the best possible layout for viewing and care.

Mr. Foster announced that the prize list, now in the mail to competitors, shows an overall increase which puts the total well over $125,000. Prizes have been extended, and increased in many categories. One of the largest increases was in the dairy cattle field where increased grants from the Holstein-Friesian Association matched by equal increases by the CNE, have put prizes at a new high. In the largest single exhibition building in the world, covering more than 25 acres, 10,000 live animals will be on display throughout the two week period, and more than 100 judges are employed in the many competitions.

The first change the entrants will notice is the single-card entry system which is based on the standard pedigree form and will be both easier for the entrant to fill out and easier for inspection and quick office handling. When the exhibitor arrives at Exhibition Park, another improvement will be evident as extensive paving has been put down north of the cattle barns at the same time as a complete new floor was laid inside the barns. The new parking system introduced last year will be continued.

Dairy cattle will again be shown during the first week and will be followed by beef cattle during the second week. This year however, a parade of dairy cattle will be held during the first week, as well as the ever-popular Livestock Parade on the Wednesday of the second week. The dairy cattle show will be the largest in North America. Another new feature this year will be an auction sale of rams and ewes in the Sheep Pavilion on the afternoon of Friday, August 31, under the auspices of the Ontario Sheep Breeders Association. Only sheep that have been judged may be put up for auction in this sale, aimed at giving new breeders an opportunity to buy good stock. The judging will be on August 30 and 31, and will be limited to two classes at a time in order to permit each class to be viewed by all. Judging will be at 9 a.m., 1 p.m., and 7 p.m. on the first day for Oxford and Cotswolds, Southdowns and Lincoln, and Cheviots and Dorsets at 9 a.m., 1 p.m., and 2 p.m. on the second day for Suffolks and Shropshires, Hampshires and Leicesters, and the Freyseng Trophies.

There are new classifications for half bred and Canadian hunters, which have proven very popular breeds, and which CNE officials feel should be encouraged. Prize money for these groups has been extended and revised. The classifications for heavy draft horses, Clydesdales, Percherons and Belgians have been standardized since they are about equal in popularity. The CNE Horse Show will run through six evenings and two afternoons in the second week of the Exhibition. Prize money has been extended to six places and harness ponies have been brought up to harness horse level.

Cage birds will not be in their customary places this year, but will be closer to their natural habitat in the Horticulture Building. They will be shown from Sept. 3 to Sept. 8. In this same space, during the first week there will be a display of Tropical Fish. Another change in the Horticulture Building will be a new regulation that all commercial displays must blend in with a master plan. This will give the spectator a sense of continuity as he walks through the huge building. Prizes for both formal and informal displays have been increased and with the favorable weather, to date, visitors will see a profusion of bloom with gladioli taking their customary prominence.

There will be two completely separate all-breed Dog Shows this year, with a new panel of judges for each. Prize money will be better than any show in Canada and entries have already arrived from California to Florida, and from Nova Scotia to British Columbia. The first of the two-day shows will begin Aug. 31, the second on Sept. 3. The Cat Show has brought a similar widespread entry and will likely better all previous marks.

The farm machinery test for junior judges last year created such widespread interest that it will again be a feature. Last year it was a tractor hitched to a plow which appeared ready for work. The test was to discover as many defects as possible. This year, it will be different equipment but a similar test. To avoid any clash between the school year and the Exhibition activities for the girl junior judges, their competition will be held on Thursday and Friday of the first week, with the boys judging held on the customary Agriculture and Livestock Parade Day. The change will not mean that the girls will miss out on the Exhibition's treat to dinner and the Jimmy Durante Grandstand show, but merely that they will see it before the boys will.

In fruit and vegetable classes, there is to be a new commercial class which is aimed at aiding the housewife in choosing her packaged vegetables. Judging will be on half a dozen different fruits and vegetables should be packed for the consumer. Another feature which will catch the housewife's eye is to be sculpture in butter. The subject remains secret, but no visitor will want to miss this or any of the first at the CNE this year. The poultry show will have improved accommodation and a system of judging which will keep the audience informed of every move. Several judges will each nominate a single bird to the final judge will pick the best bird in the show and explain to the audience of more than 1,000 exactly what points led to the decision. CNE officials are expecting a record show of utility birds as increased meat prices bring increased fowl breeding. Creamery butter entries are expected from every province to round out a year which will see many records broke.

HEIFERS POISONED LOSS HIT $6,000

Poison has been blamed for the recent death of five heifers owned by Mrs. E. J. Meagher, whose farm is near Oakville.

Estimating her loss at $5,000 to $6,000, Mrs. Meagher said the poison had a copper and lead base. The heifers picked it up in a pasture about 10 days after my orchard was sprayed with the same type of poison," she said.

A farmer near Warton, Ontario, lost seven head of cattle last week to what he termed deliberate poisoning. Eleven others also were taken ill from the same cause.
