a good meadow for good milk...

It takes an expert to give good advice on what kind of meadow will help give good milk.

Every farmer can tell a good farm. He can run his experienced eye over the fields, the barn, the stock — and in no time he has sized up the situation.

But the more experienced farmer — who farms for better crops — for better milk yields, goes to the expert for advice on the soil and the many other factors that help to assure good results from his efforts. It is the degree of his own knowledge and experience plus that of the experts that lead to the best results. As a farmer friend recently put it — "It takes a good meadow to help make good milk and plenty of it, and it takes an expert to help me make a good meadow."

In the investment field, the above finds a good parallel. It takes a good "meadow" in the form of good high grade securities to make "good milk" in the form of regular rate of interest and dividend. And it takes an expert with long experience to give the best investment counsel.

A good farmer invests in his fields. He knows the farm's past record and by properly preparing the soil and sowing good seed, he reaps a good harvest.

The same goes in the investment field. Care and attention must be given to every purchase. The financial position of the company into which the investment is being made, must be well known, its record for dividends over a long period must be studied — when such care is taken, good results generally accrue.

As the soil expert knows a good meadow the investment counselor knows a good investment

Here are four actual case histories from our files. All of these successful investments were made on our recommendations.

TORONTO

A young married man decided to open an account in 1940, with $1,400. Since that time he has never had more than $70,000 of his own capital in the account. Up to the end of 1950 he had withdrawn $30,000 and his investment still had a net value of $27,381.

GODERICH

A widow has had an average amount of approximately $5,000 invested since 1944. To her original investment she has added the income from her securities, bringing her net cash investment now to $11,780. Her stocks now have a market value of over $10,000 and 50% of the funds are invested in conservative public utilities. She is deriving at the present time an annual income of over $1,000 or 8 1/2% on her net cash investment.

PARIS

Since opening an account two years ago this client, who is a widow, has purchased some conservative common and convertible preferred stocks. Her average cash investment has been $11,500 during this period. If her stocks were sold at current levels, the net proceeds would be approximately $15,500. Her present investments pay her total dividends of $758 per annum or 6 1/2% on her net cash investment of $12,130.

GRAND VALLEY

A school teacher has had an average amount of $2,100 invested in her account since she opened it in 1939. Her net cash investment at the end of 1950 was $1,905 and her securities had a market value at that time of $1,890. From this her annual investment income is $185 or over 9% on her net capital investment.

The size of the sum to invest is not important!

Money "frozen" in a bank account does its owner little good — surplus funds, no matter how small, should be put to work to earn a fair return and augment your income. Many of the greatest corporations are largely owned by the so called "small investor." A recent survey demonstrated the surprising fact that many hundreds of thousands of "blue chip" corporate shares are owned by people in the smaller urban and rural communities. And large sums have been collectively paid out for many years to investors, many of whom you will quite possibly know personally.

The size of the sum to invest is not important. You may have funds you would like to invest. On the other hand, we would like to discuss this matter of investment with you, and without any obligation to you.
