Queer Facts About Spider Revealed by Entomologist

Ticks smell with their front legs. Spiders digest most of their food before eating.

These are some of the peculiarities of one of earth's oldest and most widely distributed animal classes, as described by R. E. Snodgrass of the U. S. department of agriculture in a report issued by the Smithsonian institution.

It is an exhaustive description of the feeding organs of the group which includes spiders, mites, and ticks.

In rocks laid down about 500 million years ago, geologists find fossils of sea animals known as trilobites—very remotely related to the spiders and crabs of today. They were the dominant form of life in their age. They were essentially jawless creatures, having only a mouth through which they probably sucked mud into the alimentary tract. They depended for their nutriment on whatever organic matter might be contained in this mud.

Since then jaws and other accessory mouth parts for grasping, tearing, crushing, and chewing have been developed in the processes of evolution. The spider and tick groups, however, have followed a line apart and remain about as jawless today as their most remote ancestors.

This is one of the ways in which they differ most strikingly from the insects, it is pointed out in Mr. Snodgrass' report.

They must live on a liquid diet. In the feeding of spiders, digestion outside the body plays an important part. A powerful digestive fluid from the stomach is discharged on the prey and completely liquefies the soft tissues.

Main Causes of Farm Fires And How to Prevent Them

Defective chimneys rank high as a cause of farm fires during the heating season. Repair cracks or other defects and replace rusted or burned out stove pipes as a first step towards preventing a fire.

Use a metal or asbestos floor covering under wood for coal burning stoves. Use double metal ventilated chimneys where stovepipes pass through frame walls or partitions.

Another group of farm fires are started by sparks on roofs. A spark arrester on your chimney will eliminate this risk. This hazard can also be reduced by installing fire-retardant roofing.

Other farm fires are due to the misuse of petroleum and its products. Every time you use gasoline, kerosene, or tractor fuel to start or sustain a fire you invite disaster. Don't gamble with leaky connections, defective equipment, or poor adjustment on kerosene stoves or oil burning furnaces.

Tank heater, feed heaters or any other type of heating equipment around your farmstead should also be checked carefully. See that they are in good condition and installed safely. Defective tank heaters, or installations too close to buildings, straw or other flammable materials lead to many costly winter fires.

Composition of Proteins

Chemically, proteins are among the most complex of all organic substances. All proteins are composed mainly of five elements—nitrogen, carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and sulfur. The most significant is nitrogen. When these elements are grouped together in various proportions the resulting compounds are called amino acids. Different amino acids combined in a variety of ways make up the many kinds of protein in plants and animals. The proteins in livestock feed are not necessarily identical with those that compose the proteins in the animal's body. In order to assimilate them, the animal, in the process of digestion, must break down the feed proteins into amino acids. These are then rearranged into compounds that can be used to build animal proteins.

Freight Rates 100 Years Ago

Today's freight rates and passenger fare may seem high, but on looking back 100 years ago, shippers and passengers alike are very much better off. According to Doggett's "Railroad Guide and Gazette of 1848," the average revenue per ton-mile in that year was 8.97 cents for first-class freight and 6.16 cents for second-class freight as against an average of 1.076 cents in 1947. Revenue per passenger-mile was reported by Doggett as 3.51 cents, while 1947's average was 2.097. Also, in 1848, the dollar had much more value than today.

Care of Inlaid Linoleum

If you want your inlaid linoleum to have lasting good looks and give long wear, give it gentle care. Too much water, strong soaps and harsh cleaning agents are the worst enemies of linoleum. Homemakers will shorten the life of their linoleum by trying too hard to keep them clean. Best method of cleaning and protecting inlaid linoleum is to wash it with a mop or cloth wrung almost dry. Warm water and mild soap may safely be used for washing. It should be rinsed with clear warm water. After it has thoroughly dried give it two thin coats of paste wax and polish thoroughly.

Make It a Good
 Christmas

The season, the music, the good wishes, and quiet dreams in anticipation of the delights ahead, make Christmas mean much to everyone.

Christmas primarily conveys to us the good tidings of salvation to all people, to the entire world. Christmas too, may be a symbol of Democracy... of those places where people can still have all those things and do those things forbidden to lands where tyranny treads and the Saviour outlawed.
