Hospital at Brampton Gets Atkinson Grant

Twenty seven years ago, thanks to the vision and efforts of the Women's Institute, the town of Brampton opened a community hospital that today has grown and expanded to become, in terms of human welfare, the town's greatest asset.

Named the Peel Memorial hospital, in honor of those who lost their lives in World War I, this public institution, with its six private rooms, two three-bed wards and a nursery for three, was doomed to suffer the growing pains of childhood. However, developing with the population of the community, the hospital today can accommodate 78 adults and 27 babies, but still has not reached maturity.

Crowded Beyond Capacity
"At times we have been crowded to more than capacity but have always managed to find accommodation for one more patient," said R. I. Blain, chairman of the board of governors. "In fact, during the first three months of this year it has been necessary to care for 275 patients in the corridors and we are once more confronted with the need for further expansion."

A truly community hospital, made possible by the generosity of the people, organizations, service clubs and industry, its facilities approach those found in large city hospitals. The original hospital is still the heart of the institution, but a face-lifting program, completed three years ago, expanded the bed capacity ment and new laboratory. The latest acquisition is a modern fracture table for the x-ray department.

"Addition of this fracture table made possible by the $2,500 grant from the Atkinson Charitable Foundation, greatly increases the efficiency of the hospital and provides our medical staff with a very essential piece of x-ray equipment," said Mr. Blain. "It is a splendid gift and when required, will provide close to home emergency treatment for more than 60,000 citizens served by the Peel Memorial."

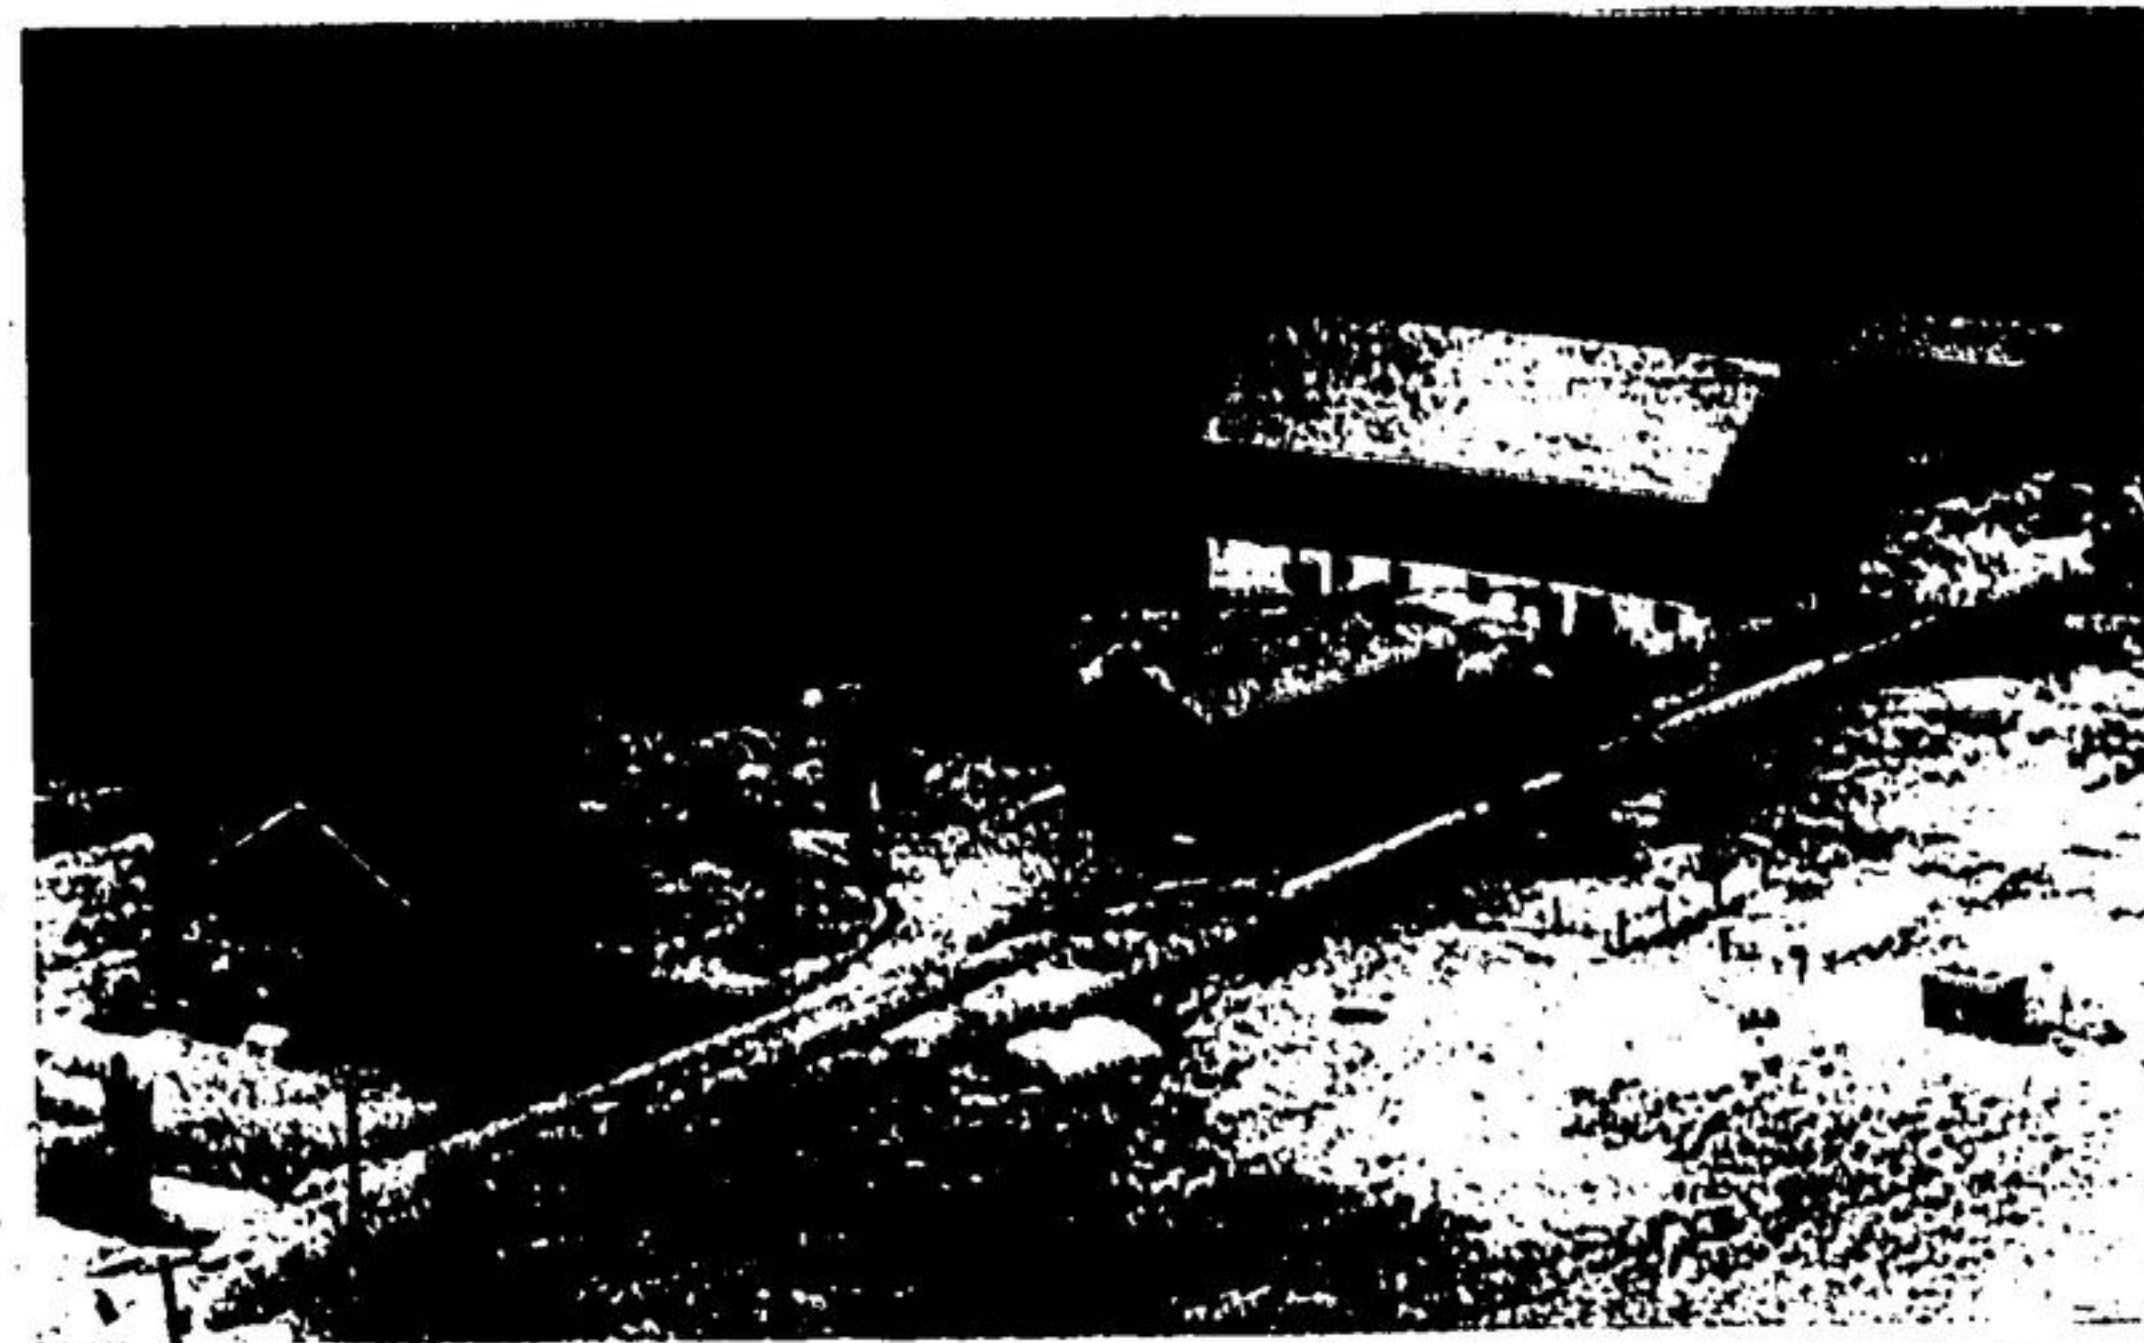

Birthplace of 6,000 Children
During its 27 years of operation, Peel Memorial Hospital has been host to more than 30,000 of the district's sick and injured, and birthplace of upwards of 6,000 children.

"Hospitalization today is big business" and the richest investment that a community can make, in the health and welfare field, is to provide such service for its citizens," said C. V. Charters, chairman of the publicity committee. "Here in Brampton, we were fortunate and are indebted to the Women's Institute for their foresight and to the Great War Veterans' association, for following through at war's end the 10-year struggle to establish a county hospital."

Although expansion is indicated by the ever growing number of admissions, last year 2,896, an increase of 415 over 1950, the board of governors immediate project is erection of additional quarters for the nursing staff. This $75,000 project, supported by the community will be completed late this year.

"Perhaps we have not reached maturity yet," concluded Mr. Charters, "but the Peel Memorial hospital has certainly increased in stature in the last 27 years as indicated by the number of admissions, 177 in the first year of operation and 2,896 in 1951."

THIS FARM HAD EARLY SAWMILL

No. 11 in the Herald Lucky Farmer photo quiz, which appeared in the June 25th edition, was the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Archer.

Mr. Archer has been owner of the 100 acre property at lot 8, Concession 7 since purchasing it from Walter Brownridge in 1943. Prior to that he lived at Eriandale and Toronto, leaving the cartage business to take up farming as a vocation. Purchased Holsteins and purebred Yorkshire hogs are a specialty with Mr. Archer. He finds time to serve as a director of Equine Agricultural Society while his wife is a member and past secretary of Ashgrove Women's Institute. His teen-year-old son Barry attends Milton high school and their second son, Ray, 11, is a pupil at Ashgrove public school. Both boys take an interest in junior farmer work.

Original owner of the farm was John Brooks, who was given the deed from the crown. His son, Dave, farmed there after his father, then moved to Georgetown where he had a flour-and-feed-business until his death. Mr. Walter Brownridge succeeded his father, W. W. Brownridge and in 1924 tore down the old log house and built the present modern building. In 1939 he added a new barn to the property. An historic building which still remains is another building back of the barn which was used by the original owner as a sawmill, possibly the only sawmill in the district in those early years.

STEWARTTOWN

Congratulations to Jean Corley who passed her Grade 1 piano and Riby Tennant, honours in Grade 4. Michael Hufman entertained his playmates on his 6th birthday. Swimming at the playground was followed by a picnic supper.
