HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

TOMORROW WILL DECIDE FOOTBALL CHAMPIONSHIP
Leona Conn
Last Tuesday, the girls' basketball team played a return game in Milton and were defeated 18-12.

The football team has had better luck, winning against Milton Monday and Acton Thursday. It was a very close game but we ended with a score of 26-15. After the game the cheerleaders along with their mascot Bob Tracey (who was dressed as a cat) rode around in a 1947 Cadillac convertible. The final football game will be tomorrow with Milton. It will be the deciding game to see who this year's champions will be.

Mr. Sanders from Guelph is going to help the square dance set for the Royal Winter Fair competition. Next Student Council meeting will be on Tuesday at noon hour. The school choir will be singing in Guelph, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on November 23. The next Sunday they will sing in St. John's United Church here. A fireside service will follow each of these.

A party has been planned for the high school on Thursday, November 13th at 7.30 p.m.

MACKENZIE NEWS

Now that we have helped the citizens of the United States solve the problem of getting a new president, perhaps we can concentrate on some of our own affairs.

There is still time to make your sewage connections before bad weather. We have 4" transito asbestos pipe in 10 ft. lengths complete with couplings at 47c per ft. Fittings cost from $1.25 to $3.75 each. 4" glazed sewer pipes in 2 ft. lengths are 37½¢ per ft. Jung's tips and bends vary in cost from $1.40 to $2.65.

See you wearing a Poppy on Saturday.

Nursery Tale Wolf Is Nearly Extinct In US

The true wolf of nursery tales and folklore is nearly extinct in the United States. Once abundant over most of this country, it has been pursued ruthlessly because stock raising is almost impossible where it exists in numbers. A few still persist in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Oregon, and they are killed there whenever reported. Great numbers, however, exist in certain parts of Canada and Alaska.

This dreaded, pack-hunting creature has given way to two close relatives that are less formidable nuisances — the well-known coyote of the Western plains and the red wolf of the lower Mississippi valley.

Considerably closer to the true wolf than the coyote is the red wolf, a southern form which is little known outside its immediate habitat in the lower Mississippi Valley.

The true wolf once covered most of the northern hemisphere. It has vanished long since from most of western Europe where, in medieval times, packs used to invade villages.

Baby Lobsters Travel For Great Distances

The life story of a lobster that leaves home as an infant is long unfolded by marine science. The Florida spiny lobster, or sea crayfish, may travel many hundreds of miles from the place it is spawned to the sea bottom where it grows to maturity.

The discovery expands earlier scientific concepts and knowledge of crustaceans, a family that supposedly does little ocean traveling — until a member is unlucky enough to walk into a lobster pot.

Instead of staying home, tiny spiny lobsters have been found drifting in the warm, bright, blue swath of the Gulf Stream off Miami, together with hundreds of other kinds of microscopic sea life lumped under the general name "plankton." The scientists believe these lobsterlings may have come from waters around the West Indies, far to the south. If this be so, lobsterlings spawned in the Miami area probably travel far to the north before settling down.

Erratic Sun

Why doesn't the Sun rise and set in the same direction all the year around? The axis on which the Earth rotates every day is not at right angles to the plane in which it revolves about the Sun, but tilted about 23 1/2 degrees. Between March and September the northern hemisphere leans towards the Sun, so we see it far north in the sky. It rises in the northeast and sets in the northwest. Around December, however, the northern hemisphere leans away from the Sun, which is then seen far to the south, so it rises in the southeast and sets in the southwest. At the equinoxes, about March 21 and Sept. 23, the Sun is directly over the Earth's equator, and neither north nor south, so it rises due east and sets directly west.

Lonely Life

George Lush, 50, is the only white man still trapping fox for the Hudson's Bay Co. in the trackless muskeg of the northwest territory. Often Lush sees no one in the five months of the trapping season. He lives in a three room frame cabin on the Big river. For recreation, Lush reads old magazines and plays solitaire (doesn't cheat himself). He took in a radio several years ago, but the batteries went dead for lack of charging. He has a clock that doesn't work. When the photographer visited Lush, the trapper had lost track of two days. He has only one complaint about his life: "The arctic's getting too crowded. Maybe I won't stay much longer." Meanwhile, he goes about his lonely business as a trapper.

Uranium Alchemy

There are two main centers in the United States where uranium ore is turned by modern alchemy into fissionable "heavy atoms." At Oak Ridge, Tenn., natural uranium is converted into gas and driven through porous baffles to separate U-235, the isotope used for the atomic bomb. At Hanford, Wash., huge nuclear reactors turn uranium into plutonium, an unstable element which does not occur on earth naturally.

Source of Zinc

For 70 years, the richest source of zinc in the United States has been a 30-mile crescent of prairie country at the junction of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma. During World War II this region provided about a third of the zinc needed for American shell casings and other munitions. There are still about 60 million tons of zinc ore remaining in the field, the Bureau of Mines estimates, although much of it is of a low grade.

Old Story

The jingle, "Mother, May I Go Out to Swim," is fourteen-hundred years old and comes from a jest book of the sixteenth century. A favorite of children in the nurseries of medieval castles, it continues to be popular among English-speaking peoples. For every man of the present time who knows the classic Bewolf, there are at least five-hundred who know the jingle.
