Churchill Show

On the return to the Palace when Sir Winston Churchill's coach came opposite us it veered from the parade.

Units following were signalled on past and Winnie and his guests together with the mounted body guard stood there to see the balance of the parade.

Immediately the shout went up "We want Winnie," and he leaped out the window and waved. Cheer after cheer broke out from the multitudes.

As the balance of the parade passed the officers in charge of each unit saluted the Prime Minister's coach.

Mr. Churchill remained there while the Royal Carriage approached and the Queen and the Duke both laughed and leaned towards the Prime Minister and waved to him. The Duke seemed to really enjoy this incident and I took colored movies. I believe we in Canada House press gallery have an exclusive on this.

As the procession passed out of our view, making a right turn at the Square, there were cheers from the throng. But even then there seemed no rush to move on.

I made my way out to the street. It had been a long day, just over 12 hours since I had entered the building, 12 hours and the passing of the greatest pageant the world had ever seen.

Air Force Fly Past

In less than an hour, as soon as time allowed for the Queen to get to the palace and take her place at the balcony, the air force fly past began.

I got as close as I could to this but crowds had filled the roads leading to the grounds down which the procession had recently passed.

Around the palace the people had broken through the police lines and filled the square. The fly-over was most thrilling. Jets and all the latest type of aircraft took part including the RCAF.

Those who had stood packed there for 36 hours or more cheered not the planes but the queen in the window.

All during the night the streets were filled with merriment, dancing and laughter. They who had endured the waiting along the streets were still not exhausted but filled the pubs and drank and danced and later watched the fireworks display.

At the Royal Derby

Only by the courtesy of members of the press and of the firm of Public Relations, Bonney and David, of London, could this story have been written.

While having lunch with a by-line writer of Logdon's Sunday Express, M. E. French, I was advised to contact the above firm. I was to get a pass to the press gallery at Epsom to see the race including the 3.00 p.m. race known all over the world as the Derby.

The press gallery was on the same level as the Royal Box, separated only by a glass partition, gave us not only a splendid view of the whole field but also close-up of the Royalty in the next box.

RAPE IN BLOOM UNUSUAL FOR HALTON

A rather unusual result of the mild winter and wet spring may be seen on the Fourth Line West, Chinguacousy where the Fuller Brothers have a 16 acre field of rape in full bloom.

Although they have been growing rape for many years, this is the first time it survived the winter. No one to whom the writer has spoken on the matter has any idea of the best method or harvesting; even the older generation of farmers has never seen any in bloom. If any reader has any experience in how to handle it, it would probably be appreciated by the brothers Fuller, who are well-known farmers in that district.

The field was plowed out of old sod in 1950, summer fallowed and planted in wheat. The Hessian fly completely ruined the crop in 1951 and last year it was fallowed again until the middle of August, when rape was drilled in. The cattle were turned into the field in October and were on it continuously until the end of January.

It came up again this spring and would have been pastured again and plowed down for spring grain and seeds, but the wet weather prevented the cattle being turned out until the field was in full bloom.

As the present quotation for rape seed is $20 a cwt., it certainly looks a better prospect than a half-drowned field of spring grain.

JUVENILE BALL TEAM WINS ACTON OPENER

Georgetown Juveniles won their opening ball game in Acton Saturday.

Using three pitchers, Georgetown came from behind to beat the Tanners 7-6. Jim Timleck started, with Ron Ritchie taking over and Ron Herrington relieving in the 8th. Bob Webster was best at bat, with three singles. Acton used two pitchers, Cunningham and Morton, but could not get the big run in the 9th with the bases loaded.

Georgetown plays their first home game here in the park on Saturday. There are still some places on the team to be filled and any boys who would like to try out should phone 35W for information.

The league is composed of teams from Georgetown, Brampton, Acton and Port Credit. Teams finishing in 2nd and 3rd place, will play a best 2-of-3 series and the winner will play a similar series with the first place team to choose a winner to go into the OBA playoffs.
