THESE ROWS OF BATTERIES are 'standing by' in the new exchange building to assure that there will be no interruption in Georgetown's dial telephone system should the hydro supply fail. Normally, the power to operate the telephone system is supplied by special generators which convert alternating current from the Hydro supply into the necessary direct current. Should the Hydro supply fail, the batteries would go into use automatically. Gordon Moore is shown testing one of them.

Everybody will be dialing

IN GEORGETOWN AFTER 7 A.M. Sunday, Sept. 20th

From that time on, you'll be able to dial all your telephone numbers. To save time and trouble when you call, please remember to:

- make sure of a number by first looking it up in your new supplementary directory;
- use all possible care in dialing — follow carefully the instructions on the front page of the new directory;
- keep your personal directory of telephone numbers up to date;

Although our new central office is fully equipped to enable us to maintain good service, your co-operation is requested in limiting the number and length of calls for the next few days.
