The Thrifty Man Is Being Overlooked

The saver is the "forgotten man" of our times, judged by the reward for his thrift. While all the principal segments of our $300 billion economy are enjoying a boom of record proportions, the return on invested savings has been lagging far behind, and in certain major areas is virtually at the lowest level on record. The question of a proper reward as an incentive to individual thrift is a subject of major importance at all times since over the years personal savings have been the lifeblood of the economy. It is of particular importance today because of the vital need to encourage greater savings on the part of the people at large, both to help keep inflationary forces in check and to provide investable funds needed for expanding the nation's productive facilities to speed up our rearmament program. The actual rate of return on invested savings, except for the more speculative areas involving the ownership of equities, has in itself shown no significant recovery from the record low levels established in the last few years. This is particularly true of the interest rate, which is of such basic importance to the individual and pooled savings of people of small or moderate means who can't afford to take chances with their "nest eggs" or "rainy day" funds.

Railroading in Ethiopia Proves Most Hazardous

Until recent years, railroading in Ethiopia was a hazardous business. The country's only railroad, a French-owned narrow gauge line, runs 485 miles, from Djibouti, in French Somaliland, to Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital. It takes three days of a train to cover the distance from one end of the line to the other. For many years the trains ran during the day only. The reason for this was the hot natives had of jerking out sections of rails to hammer into knives and spears. And sometimes they used the ties for hot lighting. The engineer proceeds with caution at all times keeping his eyes glued to the tracks ahead to make sure that same it there.

Short Cuts to Marital Misery

1. Always be the last one to give in and make up.
2. Feel sure you do more working and worrying than your better half.
3. Take it for granted, now that you're married, that you don't have to dress up, be courteous, have fun together any more.
4. Consider it silly to make love to the one who married you for love.
5. Strive harder to please your friends, in-laws, and parents than your spouse.
6. Always belittle your partner, either in front of friends or in private.
7. Be over-attentive and charming to someone you might have married—or someone your partner dislikes.
8. Go home when you have nowhere else to go.
9. Live beyond your means.
10. Tell yourself, "If it doesn't work, I can always get a divorce."

Impressive and Distinctive

A dramatic entrance hall combines black, white and the wall color of the adjoining living room in an outstanding manner. The front door and woodwork surrounding the glass panels that flank it are painted white. The remaining area around the door and the wall at right angles to it are finished in a velvety black. Against the black wall hangs a fine portrait of a member of the family. One done in life size. The wall opposite the front door is painted in the same lively green as the wall of the living room which adjoins the hall.

Cool off Chicken House

Chickens don't need airtight houses for winter comfort any more than a man in red flannels and overcoat needs a steam bath. Chickens are well protected with a coat of feathers. You don't need to go to the extreme in providing high temperature conditions in your laying house during the winter. The average poultry house is closed up too much, especially when the first cool weather approaches. Closing up the house too much traps moist air. Wet floors and dripping walls will result even though deep litter is on the floor.

New Role

Until 1492, the year Columbus sailed west and the Moors at Granada were conquered, Morocco was popularly but erroneously referred to as the "farthest west." Here, according to ancient belief, stood Atlas holding the heavens on his shoulders. Now American planes from beyond the Atlantic are to fly along those massive mountain shoulders, and the Maghreb again may find itself cast for the role of a bastion between two worlds.

Electric Pillow?

What causes the light which appears when a person moves his hand, at night, between the pillow case and a plastic pillow cover? This is due to static electricity produced on the plastic cover. The actual amount of electricity that can be generated in this manner is quite small and entirely harmless, though there may be enough to cause a small corona, which is a reddish or violet glow in the air adjacent to an electrical discharge.

Mona Church Wedding For Norval Couple

The altar, banked with brilliant gladioli, formed a lovely background in Mitchell's United Church, Mono, on Sept. 3, when Elizabeth Isobel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Dodds, Orangeville, and John MacDougall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Craig McClure, of Norval, took their marriage vows before Rev. A. G. Macpherson of Hagersville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess gown of lace over white satin, fashioned with low neckline and long sleeves. Her waist-length veil fell from a cap of lace and pearls and she carried a colonial cascade bouquet of pink roses and stephanotis.

Her attendants were attired in floor length gowns of iridescent taffeta. Jean Dodds, the bride's sister, as maid of honour, and Jane McClure, of Norval, as flower girl, were in sapphire blue; while the junior bridesmaids, Heather Huston, of Orangeville and Diane Wanless, of Toronto, wore rose. All had matching hats and mittens and contrasting colonial bouquets.

The groom was attended by his brother Andrew McClure, Dean Giffen of Norval and Harold Dodds acted as ushers.

Margaret Dodds was at the organ during the ceremony and Janet Macpherson, of Hagersville, sang "The Lord is My Shepherd" and "I Love Thee."

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Dodds received the guests in blue shantung, with pink accessories, assisted by Mrs. McClure in amethyst crepe with matching accessories.

Later the couple left for a two week honeymoon through Northern Ontario and Quebec. They are living on the groom's farm at Norval.
