Safety Film, Skit
Home School Night

A Father's Night program was presented at the Georgetown Home & School Association meeting in Chapel Street School, when men of the organization took charge of the whole evening, even to serving lunch and washing the dishes afterwards, with Vern McCumber in charge.

Because safety was the chief item, the program was primarily of a contemplative nature. In dealing with this vital topic, the association was fortunate in having E. K. McKay, general manager of the Ontario Safety League, outline some of the aspects of safety.

Though laws are made, and a certain amount of safety is taught in schools and other associations, the most responsibility rests with parents, he said, who by setting a good example for children can help greatly in reducing the accident toll. Two impressive safety films, dealing with pedestrians and drivers, were shown.

Though the program was primarily serious, it had its lighter moments as well. James Linton, with the famous Players' Guild of Georgetown, dramatized the Service poem "Dangerous Dan McGrew" in which J. L. Lambert,

SUNDAY SERVICES
AT ST. JOHN'S

At St. John's United Church on Sunday morning, Rev. John M. Smith had as his theme: "The Church Looks Forward." He used the first verse of Isaiah 62: "For the church's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake (home to them). I will not resist, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth." And from Acts, the commission of Jesus: "Ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, (home), and in all Judea (community), and in Samaria (where not popular) and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

The time when Isaiah made this utterance was one of the most hopeful periods in the history of the children of Israel, and the prophet caught the significance of it, yet was not content to let things slide at that, but looking forward, knew it was a wise time to act, and, as he put it, "not hold my peace, nor rest until the church goes forth as a burning flame, penetrating the unspotted darkness at home, in the community round about, even in other lands, friendly or hostile, even to the ends of the earth."

How about us as a church and as Christians in our day and land of hope? Did not Jesus say: "Ye shall be my witnesses" in all these places? It was not a time then nor is it today for arm chair Christians, to rest and hold our peace with still so much to be done. True, the church has sent forth its light into many dark places, and down through history you can tell where it has been, and by the same token you can tell where it has not been or not been effective. As Harry Lauder equipped on the lamplighter going along the street, "I can always tell where the lamplighter is, by the trail of light he leaves behind him." And so the could have told where the lamplighter had not been by the unspotted darkness which abounded. So if we take the commission of Jesus seriously, as Christians, "Ye are my witnesses," we will be disturbed and concerned about the dark places in our world as yet until by His love and blessing or, even a knowledge of Him. And as we seek with hope and courage, to penetrate these dark places with the righteousness this goes as a burning brightness, we are sure to come up against dark obstacles which need to be removed. What are some of them?

World circumstances could be one. A world seeking peace and goodwill, yet many making war against man to try and promote peace. It doesn't sound logical, does it? And though the Christian way may be difficult to apply, where it has been, in many lands, it has worked and brought about the spirit of peace. And if all the brains and skill, labour and tremendous expense used in the world's way, could be used the Jesus way, surely the trail of light would be very distinct and burning bright. Who should do it? Jesus says: "Ye are my witnesses."

Another place where we should not rest until we get more light penetrating, is on the path our boys and girls have to tread on their road to manhood and womanhood. Many get little encouragement, example or even instruction on what is truly highest and best for them. Can we watch for obstacles in their path, and not rest nor hold our peace until they are removed? Or can we go further still and do all we can to direct and encourage them into full time Christian service, in the ministry, as deaconesses, as Christian doctors or nurses, or as Christian teachers? The light will go dim if we don't get full time witnesses.

Then are not many of our social customs, places where obstacles are hindering the true light penetrating? Jesus said to start at home and near around, and to be loyal to Him, we can not be unconcerned and condone the increase in gambling, the looseness of moral standards, the liquor nation, all unfortunately hurting and lessening the great and good influence her fine diplomacy and Christian attitude has fostered in world affairs in recent years. Why spoil it when the world is in so much need of it. Yes, we are Jesus' witnesses in world places too, if we sit back, how can He attain His high hopes for the world, hopes which are ours too? Opportunity knocks, it is ours, but it generally means hard work so we let it slip by; so often we are not willing to bend our back or give up self-wishes. God has done His part about the conditions of our lives and our living; it is up to us to make that known and have it applied. We dare not hold our peace, nor rest, until His light shines and burneth as a lamp everywhere. What we do now, is for the future too, so let us look forward.

How much are you worth? was the boy's and girl's story. Mr. Smith cited a case recently where a boy who had been in an accident and suffered a permanent injury which destroyed his ability to smile on one side of his face at least, had been awarded $20,000 by a judge. Mr. Smith asked the boys and girls to consider that, at that rate, they must be worth a great deal so to be very watchful not to lower their value by doing anything to hurt themselves physically and especially to hurt their character. They were worth very much to God as well but to remember, so was everyone else, black or white, in any land.

Mr. Smith's evening subject was "The Protestant and the scriptures." He showed how the scriptures as we have them had been transcribed from the writings of God-inspired men, reserved through the ages and eventually made readily available to all who wished to read. For the Protestant they contain the answers to his life problems, and are a faithful guide to his highest living. They have all the needs for a man's salvation and his way back to God. To be of value they need to be used, loyally and wisely and cherished for the preloved truths they contain.

Mr. James Evans sang "Beyond the Dawn." Mrs. Evans accompanied and led in the service of praise.
