Tells of W.I. Conference

contacted to help visitors from abroad.

Miss Ethel Chapman, from the government, spoke on Friday morning. Our aims are better homes, better communities and to develop leaders. She said to do as you please, as a branch within regulations. Don't shingle the church through the W.I., but through the church. Standing committees should try out new projects. Keep the spirit of the W.I. in good order by a thorough knowledge of the handbook. She stressed that the W.I. was made for the women, not women for the Institute, and that we must not let our women be exploited, but they should have social relaxation, and that while a certain amount of money is necessary, we should try to make it an easy way, don't we all want to do that? but a project that helps to develop us, or those who take part, such as a play, could be a money making project too. She quoted a poem written years ago about the isolated farm women watching a road wind aimlessly, but that now they are on the road a good deal. We need change from when the W.I. was first organized, as it was for isolated farm women, but the times are changed, and they are not so isolated.

Giving the programs ourselves helps to educate us and if you educate a woman you educate the whole family, and meeting the changing conditions of the times we should use the good things of the past. Is our work lasting? It needs a hint of eternity, and she asked the president, "Have you the vision to see the possibilities in people?"

Mrs. Ellen Fairclough, the P.C. MP for Hamilton gave an address, and it was very good, but by that time I was getting weary of taking notes and felt rather optimistic that the Mercury would have a report of her speech, but I think the Mercury must be a liberal paper, as they didn't report one word of her speech, that I could find, but did have a picture of her. However, I do remember jokes, and she told a good one, so I'll just settle for that.

There was a panel discussion on the theme "Start where you are with what you have," which was a disappointment, as it turned out to be five speeches, which could be summed up by the advice to study the hand book, and explaining the contents of the same. Some suggestions were made for raising money, such as white elephant or superfluity sale, rummage sale, vanishing teas, etc.

Mr. Currie, chief of welfare planning in civil defence, Ottawa, spoke on Civil Defence. He said that while in case of war, the cities would be the target of bombs, the country people would be the ones who would have to look after the homeless and wounded, the foodless and the ones needing clothing. We must educate our people to change in case of war, or peacetime catastrophes such as the Sarina tornado. Kind hearts and willing hands get in each other's way.

URGES SUPPORT FOR SCOTT MISSION CAMP

Georgetown, Ontario
34 River Drive,
July 17, 1934

Dear Sir:

While in Hillsburgh today, I chanced to notice the sign of the Scott Mission Camp located in the village. I was privileged to be made acquainted with Rev. Morris Zeldman and his wife who operate this place for the benefit of underprivileged children and their mothers, who otherwise would have little chance of this wonderful change of environment. Mr. Zeldman showed me through the buildings and over the grounds, comprising something over two acres in extent. Living quarters have been added as donations have made it possible and supervised recreation is provided. A fair-sized swimming pool, partly made possible by the goodwill of the local council has made possible this form of enjoyment. This is a work done voluntarily in connection with the Scott Mission located in Toronto, and the only requisite for help in any case is dire need.

Not only are the physical needs looked after in the program, but the beautiful location and restful atmosphere is conducive to mental relaxation. Spiritual requirements are sought to be met in a beautiful chapel in which daily services are conducted. At present over 200 meals a day are being served, and the benefits accruing from the overall program are certainly worthy of our recording and appreciation.

We who live in such a splendid place as Georgetown, with all its advantages, may be prone to forget the lot of the less fortunate. At Scott Camp, however, their need is being met, and we should feel privileged if we can be of any assistance to so worthy a cause.

Banker's Father Was Division Court Clerk

The death is recorded this week of Donald Cameron, 78, of Sudbury, and father of Al Cameron, manager of the Bank of Montreal at Newmarket, and formerly with the bank when it was located in Georgetown. The late Mr. Cameron was clerk of the division court in Sudbury, and was buried with full military honours in that city. He was a native of Corpach, Invernesshire, Scotland, where he was raised and educated, served as a buck private during the Boer War, and rose to be color sergeant. He came to Canada in 1913, settling in Sudbury, and three years later enlisted with the 159th Battalion, going overseas with the Canadian Army in 1916, to serve in France. He saw action with the 58th Battalion as a company commander, and was wounded at Passchendaele in 1917. He was awarded the Military Cross for outstanding bravery in the First World War, and also received a long service medal for a quarter century of service at major before his discharge from the armed forces.

He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, Nickel Lodge AF & AM and a charter member of the Sudbury Branch of the Legion.

It was in 1919 that he married Eva Mary Kent, in England, and then returned to Sudbury, and was a partner with Lorne Fowler, with the Fowler Hardware, for several years. He later severed his connection with the firm to become city of Sudbury purchasing agent.

In 1935 he was appointed clerk of the First Division Court. Besides his widow, he is survived by two sons, Alastair Cameron of Newmarket, and Allan, of Montreal, and two daughters, Barbara and Sheila, at home, and four grandchildren, Donald and John Cameron of Newmarket and Susan and Anne of Montreal.
